MONDAY'S MEETINGS FOR CIVIC LEAGUE MOST INTERESTING

Miss Maud Van Buren Will Deliver An Address at City Hall, Open to the Public.

One of the most important meetings of the Civic League of the city will be held on Monday next, at the city hall. In the afternoon the regular November gathering will be held, reports of committees made and matters of importance discussed. This meeting is at 3:30. In the evening there will be a public meeting at which Miss Maud Van Buren of Owatonna, Minn., will deliver an address. Miss Maud Van Buren is chairman of the department of civic leagues of the American Civic association. She comes endorsed as a public speaker by some of the leaders of the civic league work and persons prominent in the betterment work throughout the United States. While in the city she will be the guest of Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy on St. Lawrence avenue.

Miss Van Buren will also be present at the Monday afternoon meeting and will discuss with the various committees the best method of pursuing their individual problems. She will remain in the city over Tuesday and hold conferences with various ladies interested in the work. Her coming to Janesville is a most advanced step in the work of the local organization.

The Monday afternoon session will be called at three-thirty to give the teachers in the city schools an opportunity to attend, and will be the regular November meeting of the league. The various committees will report the progress made in their respective lines up to this time and it is expected that Miss Van Buren will be present to give advice and suggestions.

An evening meeting promises to be a most interesting one and the league is anxious for a large attendance of citizens. According to one of the league members Miss Van Buren is a specialist in civic work, and by Janita Lloyd Jones and other prominent civic workers, and the Janesville civic league is most fortunate in securing her for one lecture. Admission will be free and it is hoped that all citizens will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Miss Van Buren.

ARBITRATION TREATY SOUGHT BY DENMARK

Negotiations for Comprehensive Agreement Taken Up at Suggestion of Danish Minister.

(By Associated Press.) Washington, Nov. 8.—Secretary Bryan announced that he was negotiating with Denmark a treaty for arbitration of all questions which might arise, including those of national honor. The negotiations were undertaken at the initiative of Constantin Brun, Danish minister here.

The proposed treaty is understood to be even broader in its terms than the Knox treaties with Great Britain, and France, which were so radically amended by the senate as to be practically devitalized. The Knox treaties provided for arbitration of all questions, but provided that the powers of the senate, provision was made for a joint commission to determine the questions to be submitted subject to the approval of the senate. The pending convention, it is believed, will dispense with such a provision and proposes that all questions shall be subject to arbitration. Denmark already has a treaty of this similar to the one which Minister Brun seeks to negotiate with the United States.

TODAY CENTENNIAL TALLADEGA BATTLE

Anniversary to be Celebrated by Patriotic and Historical Societies of Florida.

(Special to this Gazette.) Talladeega, Ala., Nov. 8.—The local patriotic and historical societies have made arrangements for an appropriate celebration tomorrow of the one hundredth anniversary of the battle of Talladeega, one of the most important conflicts of the Creek Indian war. The battle was between about 2,000 mounted Tennessee troops under Gen. Andrew Jackson and a force of 1,000 or more Indians led by Chief Weatherford.

The battle occurred in the early morning of Nov. 9, 1813, the Americans having been notified of the attack by a friendly Indian who had escaped from Fort Talladeega, in the guise of a hog, he having encased himself in a hog skin and run several miles to meet the troops of Gen. Jackson.

The troops entered Talladeega from the north side of the city, the road still bearing the name of Jackson's Trail. The general's army included Col. Coffee, Bowie and other noted Indian fighters. The principal streets of Talladeega to this day bear the names of men in the conflict.

The Indians left more than 200 dead on the field, and it was supposed they had as many wounded. About a score of Americans, including three officers, were slain. By their defeat the Indians forever lost their supremacy in this section. After the battle they surrendered their rights to the incoming settlers, who founded the city of Talladeega.

SHIP MOLDING SAND EARLY COMING WEEK

Siding to Deposits on Maxfield Land Practically Complete—Several Orders Received.

Shipments of molding sand from the extensive deposits on the Maxfield land about four miles north of the city will probably begin early next week, the siding to the pits having been practically completed. Although the Chicago and Northwestern railway at first opposed putting in the siding, its chief objection being to cutting their main line, an agreement has been made with them for the installation of the track, and this has been approved by the railway commission. Those who are financially interested in the shipping and sale of the sand are Judge H. L. Maxfield, Alva Maxfield, Mrs. Sophia and Miss Julia B. Maxfield, and Drs. J. F. Pember and T. W. Kuzum.

Several grades of molding sand, suitable for almost every variety of work, are to be found on the Maxfield land. There are grades that can be used for malleable iron, steel, and brass castings, equal to sand from New York state, Zanesville, Ohio, and Ottawa, Illinois. It has been tested in every conceivable way in the laboratory and in actual foundry practice and pronounced of very high quality. That used for steel castings is 98 per cent silica and can stand a temperature of 40,000 degrees.

Shipments will be made to manufacturing industries within a radius of two hundred miles of Janesville and several large orders have already been received. A mechanical foundry operated by gasoline power has been purchased and will be kept busy until the ground freezes hard.

OHIO A WORTHY FOE FOR BADGER ELEVEN

Neither Team Scores in the First Quarter—Wisconsin Makes Touchdown in Second Period.

(By Associated Press.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 8.—Wisconsin and Ohio State Universities were foes this afternoon in the last home game of the season. Ohio was led by coach John W. Wilce, former Wisconsin fullback and last year assistant director of athletics at his alma mater. Having fully recovered from their hard knocks received in the Minnesota game, the Badgers were in good shape for the contest. Ohio State came in good physical trim with the exception of the star fullback, Graf, who was expected to play wearing a brace for his injured shoulder. The Buckeyes before the game were determined to push the Badgers to the limit before they are ready to acknowledge themselves inferior.

The lineup was as follows: Wisconsin—Lange, I. E.; Buck, I. T.; Golein, I. G.; Powell, C.; Keeler, R. S.; Butler, R. T.; Olette, T. S.; Bellows, G.; Cummings, I. H.; Van Gent, R. H.; Tandberg (Capt.), T. B.

Ohio State—Cherry, I. E.; Snyder, I. T.; Kiefer, L. G.; Trautman, C.; Geissman, R. G.; Broughton, R. T.; Williams, A. E.; Pickrel, G.; Briggs, I. H.; Swartzburg, R. H.; Graf, T. B.

While defeated by Indiana last Saturday, the Ohioans were turned aside from victory only in the last two minutes of play when a fumbled pass behind their own goal line enabled a Booster end to recover the ball for a touchdown. Today's game with the Badgers will be by no means an easy one. Wilce has developed a powerful line. His men weigh about eight pounds per man lighter than the Badgers, but they are fast and work together well.

Ohio State is the newest member of the western conference. The advance ticket sale promises a fair attendance, but probably not up to the average this season. The Ohio team is accompanied by the band of fifty pieces and a hundred football squad of 39 men is a resident of Ohio.

Badgers Score Touchdown. At end of first period the score stood Wisconsin 0, Ohio State 0. Near end of second period Wisconsin made a touchdown.

At the end of the third quarter the score stood: Wisconsin, 12; Ohio, 0.

Give the Credit Now.

We ought daily or weekly to dedicate a little time to the reckoning up of the virtues of our belonging—wife, children, friends—contemplating them then in a beautiful collection. And we should do so now, that we may not pardon and love in vain and too late, after the beloved one has been taken away from us to a better world.—Jean Paul Richter.

AFTER PAY FOR WORK ON MEDIUM

Mrs. Mai Sparks Bryant.

Mrs. Mai Sparks Bryant, four times postmistress of the Arkansas house of representatives, was promised $15,000 by her uncle, worth half a million, if she would get back valuable papers he had left with a spiritualist and which he feared would get into the possession of his girl who was seeking divorce. Court has awarded Mrs. Bryant $10,000, but the Odd Fellows lodge, which is the principal legatee of the estate, is fighting the case on second appeal.

CULTONS SURPRISED ON SILVER WEDDING

Party Held Last Evening at Home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Culton—Church Men's Club Meeting.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Edgerton, Nov. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Culton were very emphatically reminded that yesterday was their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary when the young married people's bridge club and a few others, twenty in all, completely and pleasantly surprised them at their home here last evening. A 6:30 dinner was served by the self-invited guests, the table in the spacious dining room, being beautifully decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. Clenden Farnum read a very appropriate poem of his own composition, which told the story of their courtship. They were presented with a beautiful silver coffee pot, G. W. Blanchard making the presentation speech. After dinner they adjourned to the dance hall, where they enjoyed a dance program for a short time. The remainder of the evening was spent in playing bridge. Mrs. G. W. Blanchard carrying off the honors. Although Mr. and Mrs. Culton were surprised they proved themselves equal to the occasion and their reputation as genial host and hostess will grow in height.

Men's Club Meets. The Men's Club of the Congregational church met at the home of J. J. Pierson last evening. The subject discussed was "Shook Sexology," taught in the public schools. The speakers were Rev. Gregory, Dr. Morrison, Willard North, Thos. North and Louis Anderson.

Andrew McIntosh furnished music, and after the program, delightful refreshments were served. About thirty members were present and the meeting was considered a very successful one.

GINK AND DINK. THE COOK WAS IN VERY GOOD HEALTH.

SPORT Snap-Shots

It has been Kilbane's wont in his battles thus far to work along easily, showing his speed and science and rolling up enough points to win the fight without trying for a knockout. Occasionally along comes a fighter who, having heard this, thinks the champ's easy-going, harmless person, without any kind of a wallop, and that all one need do would be to slap Johnny real smartly and he would drop over. Sometimes they try to get the champion's goat would give Johnny a knockout record as long as his reach. Which is pretty long.

Wholesale discontent with the manner in which National league affairs have been handled has brought about a determination among the club owners and officials to remove Lynch as president and the chances are that the mix-up will get the blue envelope within another month. There is a possibility that those arraigned against Lynch will not be able to cause his undoing at the next meeting, but nevertheless his days are numbered. Should there be a disagreement as to the selection of his successor, Lynch may be able to hold forth for another season, but that at the most will be the extent of his holding the office. The administration in the National league are said to have grown more and more unsatisfactory of late years and small bickerings, warring factions and the like have not contributed in any way to the furthering of peace and content in National league circles. For example, the New York club held the whole league in a dispute for some twelve months over the sharing of their enormous profits in the world's series of 1912. Previous legislation had been put through by league magnates providing that the world's series winners were to pay over 25 per cent of their profits to the league. The motion went through 7 to 1, the New York club being the only team to vote against it. And yet when the Giants won their change at the big encounter in 1912 they refused to turn over the 25 per cent and the matter was in litigation for an entire year before the Giants were made to come clean to the league treasury. Such things as this have played hob with contentment and sweet tranquillity in the National league and the ball playing and the pennant race have suffered. A new president and a few other officials who know their ear from a hole in the ground will help things there immensely.

WAUKESHA AND EDGERTON MEET ON GRIDIRON TODAY

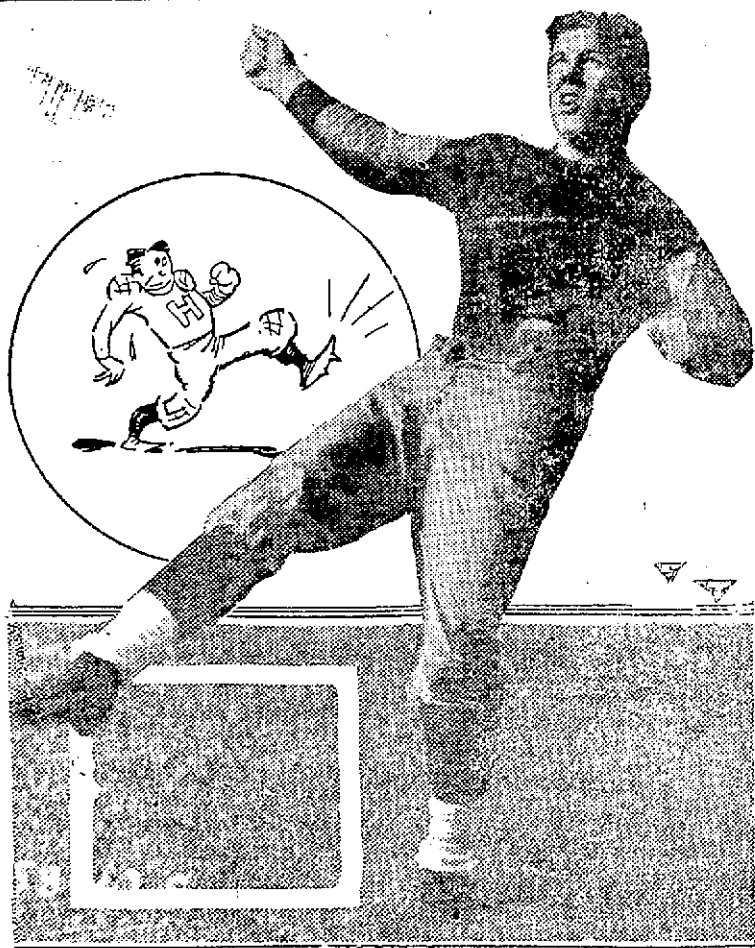

The strength of the Waukesha high school rests with the outcome of her struggle with the Edgerton high at Edgerton this afternoon. If the Spring City can pull away with a victory, it means she has a chance for the title, but if defeated, the southern title goes to no other eleven than Madison, because Beloit defeated Edgerton, and in turn were defeated by Madison, by a big score. Racine may, however, be given a chance, because of the ill-feeling resulting in the defeat of Racine by the Waukesha eleven, last Saturday at Waukesha, by the score of 7 to 6. Waukesha officials, who were allowed to participate, it is said, turned against Racine, thus checking them from gaining a victory which should have been theirs easily. Racine has protested on this ground.

PLAN GREAT SERIES OF INTERNATIONAL ATHLETIC CONTESTS

Sporting Calendar Contains Tentative Dates for Davis Cup, Tennis, Polo and Yacht Races.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, November 8.—With the echoes of the most successful season of international competition in the history of American sport still faintly heard, plans are being made for a still greater series of contests in 1914. Not satisfied with the winning or retreating of the tennis, polo, soccer, yachting, balloon and rifle trophies, the American athlete and sportsman is preparing to broaden the list before another twelve months shall have rolled around. Out of nine competitions of international character or entry the United States representatives won six, lost two, and did not enter the ninth. The two defeats came in the motor boat race and the woman's golf tournament, both of which were won by English entrants.

Looking forward to 1914 the sporting calendar already contains tentative dates for another round of Davis cup tennis and international polo. Sir Thomas Lipton's fourth attempt to lift the America's cup will be a feature of the year in sport. The English amateur and professional golfers will again invade the States and American entries are assured for the English championships. The winning of the balloon race trophy assures a renewal of the air classic here next autumn. The Amateur Athletic Union will send a team of athletes to Athens for the local cycle Olympic games to be held there next spring and other minor international competitions, such as canoeing, archery and cricket, are assured.

In fact, the spirit of international competition can be said to continue without interruption, since several American teams are preparing to leave for foreign shores this month. The two professional baseball teams, representing the major leagues in their round-the-world tour, will undoubtedly attract wide attention, but the Giants and White Sox will not be the only American athletic representatives to depart for foreign competition during the next few weeks. While the professional baseball players will have greater numerical strength when they depart from Vancouver on November 15, the Amateur Athletic Union track and field team and several American tennis players will also be followed with interest in their invasion of Oriental and Australasian fields. The athletes are scheduled to sail for Melbourne on November 12, and William Johnston, Elia Futrell and possibly one or two other California tennis experts will leave for the Orient about the same time.

The chief object of Johnston's and Futrell's trip is to play in both the doubles and singles matches of the Tennis Championship of the Orient tournament to be held at Manila, January 3 to 12. This tournament is of more than usual importance this season because of the high-class entry list expected. The leading players of Australia, Japan, China and the Pacific coast have been invited to compete and to date the percentage of acceptances has been most encouraging. Johnston and Futrell will also visit Honolulu, Yokohama, Shanghai, Kobe and Nagasaki during their tour.

playing practice and exhibition matches wherever possible.

Camera in Athletics.

The camera is rapidly earning a place of importance in athletics and sport competition both in America and abroad. No contest or match of real interest goes unphotographed, and the readers of newspapers and magazines are daily brought face to face with the heroes of the diamond, football field, tennis court and aquatic sports. During the past few seasons, however, the lens has been found capable of filling a more useful field in the realm of amateur pastimes and recreations. The wonder of racquet sports, or even of the diamond, is made, or can be seen himself as others see him with faults in playing form clearly illustrated.

This ability to depict the strong and weak points of individuals and teams in sports and games has been discovered to be of much help to coaches and instructors. Consequently the camera is being constantly called in action by those who direct the activities of the college, club and unattached athlete. Photographs of the games in training at Cornell and Columbia are taken each season and thrown on the canvas in enlarged form while the coaches point out faults in watermanship. The same system is used in the development of several of the big varsity football teams.

Even the moving picture machine is found of assistance. The German Olympic Commission, which recently spent a month investigating the American athletic system, took back reels of films showing some of our leading athletes in action. Pictures of one of the leading United States tennis players were taken last spring to prove to England that he did not foot fault in service. Perhaps in years to come it will be possible for a competitor to rise to the pinnacle of sporting fame uncoached except by the films which will show him his faults as compared to those of the competitors, such as canoeing, archery and cricket, are assured.

Yale Stadium Attraction. When Yale alumni gather at New Haven a week from today for the annual Princeton-Yale football game, the former students will almost to a man devote a portion of their time to an inspection of the mammoth Yale stadium now under construction, almost directly across the street from the scene of the gridiron battle between the Eli and Tiger eleven. Hard progress has been made in the construction of the "Blue Bowl" as the stadium has been facetiously dubbed by members of a flippant generation, and the graduates will be able to see an excellent idea of the final appearance of the stadium as it will be thrown open to them for the Yale-Harvard game late in the autumn of 1914.

The stadium, which will be of the sunken type similar to the Syracuse University structure, is expected to seat about 60,000 spectators and is a contracting proposition of considerable magnitude. The excavating work has been completed and the wall surrounding the entire field is well under way. More than half of the thirty-two tunnels which pierce the walls for entrance and egress of spectators are finished and the structure as a whole is beginning to take shape.

The contracts for the seats and finishing features of the stadium are ready and will be open for bids shortly. Incidentally the term "Bowl" is likely to be officially adopted since David Dazett, secretary of the Committee of Twenty-one in charge of the building of the stadium, states that "The word 'amphitheatre' does not quite express the idea of the structure, as Greek amphitheatres did not ground; the building is neither oval nor circular, but elliptical. The same objections will apply to 'arena,' which has been often suggested. The arena in a Roman amphitheatre applied only to the area on which the shows were executed, and this was generally sanded; the name was derived from that portion of the ground.

"The word 'bowl' is an English name, and seems to me to be particularly descriptive of this structure, because although the use of the word is various in its applications, it was originally intended to apply to a concave vessel. Inasmuch as our playing space is approximately twenty-six feet below level of the ground, the space having been scooped out, the word seems peculiarly applicable. The word 'bowl' has the added advantage of being short and suggestive of the general appearance of the structure looking at it from the top down."

OHIO STATE SPECIAL PASSED THROUGH CITY

The Ohio State football special train passed through this city this morning on their way to Madison, where the Badgers line up against the Ohio warriors this afternoon. The train stopped for orders, leaving about nine o'clock for the Capital City. The special consisted of two sleepers, where the players were resting quietly, while a special coach, a diner and baggage car made up the rest of the train. Over two hundred rosters accompanied the team. The Ohio delegation was expected to reach the five hundred mark at today's game.

TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER LAUNCHED AT CAMDEN YARDS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—The United States torpedo boat destroyer Downes was launched today at the yards of the New York Ship Building Company in Camden, N. J. The warship is named for Captain John Downes, who served with much gallantry in the Civil War campaign against the Barbary pirates in the days when Americans were establishing a navy. The Downes was christened by Mrs. Catherine V. Simons of Washington, wife of Agent Charles H. Simons, U. S. N., a direct descendant of Captain Downes.

The new torpedo boat destroyer is 305 feet, 3 inches overall and has a breadth of 31 feet 11 inches and a displacement of 1,100 tons. The Downes will be ready for commission in about two months.

In Our Handsome New Building

No better facilities for "live" or "dead" storage could be imagined than we are offering the motorists of Janesville and vicinity.

Our new building, light, dry, airy and warm, will be used for "dead" storage. The building is absolutely fireproof, of concrete and brick construction.

There are a few reservations for "live" storage still available, with expert washing and polishing service. Our "live" storage room is heated with steam; no trouble to start cars stored here.

Launch storage in our new building. Inquire

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

"One day in a cutlery factory in Sheffield, England, wife and I were watching a smith forge a blade; the little piece of steel, heated to a bright cherry red was shaped under the hammer then heated again in the fire and hammered until it was dull gray, then heated and hammered again and again, until the smith remarked that it seemed useless, after which it was formed to heat and hammer it over and over; it didn't change its shape anyhow; and she wondered how the little blade could stand the hundreds of savage blows. The smith knew that if the blade was sent out to service after being perfectly formed without the long hammering, the edge would turn, and it would be thrown into the discard with other failures. Every blow of the hammer put something into the little blade which could not be seen, but was there, and when the test of hard service came the edge stood true and would neither turn nor crumble. So that powerful hand which forges human blades, strikes many a blow in the process, and evidently 'There's a Reason.'"

Tackle the work just in front of you. Strive in an honest way to do the best you can, and if, having done your best, there seems to appear the hand of some Overruling Power which hammers you, take it like a good piece of steel and come right off the anvil with a better temper and a keener edge. Keep honest, patient and willing to have the missing link in the chain of your life, and my word for it, the day will come when you will have a reverent respect for a Mighty Hand that is beneficent and kind after all."

This little sermonette is an extract from an address recently delivered at the convention of national advertisers by C. W. Post, of "Postum Cereal" fame. It rings so true that it is worth discussing.

The hammering experience commences very early in life and continues with monotonous regularity down through the years, to the close of the journey. The girl resents the discipline, which the mother finds necessary to administer, and the boy rebels when the father takes him out in the wood shed for purposes of correction.

The little mind, not yet developed to the point of reason, finds it difficult to submit to authority, but realizes later that the "hammering process" was a blessing in disguise, for nothing prepares a life for the work of life so effectively as the discipline of the home.

One of the pleasant memories of boyhood life is the old gray, unadorned farm house, with its old-fashioned low chambers, where seed corn dangled from the rafters, and where the snow drifted in through the crevices, but the impression that lingers vividly, is the voice of the father, floating on the stairway at five o'clock on a winter morning, reminding the lad that it was time to get up and commence the day's work.

Ever had such an experience? If not, you have missed an inheritance of early discipline, which counts for something in meeting the problems along the way. One reason why so many farmers' boys succeed in mercantile life, and go to the front, is because they come from wholesome environments, where obedience becomes a second nature, and where the clock is a convenience, rather than a regulation.

cause they come from wholesome environments, where obedience becomes a second nature, and where the clock is a convenience, rather than a regulation.

Speaking about farmers and farm life, the notion is quite popular these days that independence is painted all over the landscape, and that the one man to be envied is the man who tills his own soil, and enjoys the luxuries of butter and eggs, without counting the cost.

The proposition does look attractive to the man who doesn't own a cow or a hen, but life on the farm is not all luxury, and the reason why it represents so much more by way of contentment and happiness is because the life is more simple and when the needs are gratified the wants seldom annoy.

Character, the choicest heritage which comes to any life, is not the product of genial sunshine and gentle showers. The flowers of spring flourish in this kindly atmosphere, to wither before the year is at its meridian, but the things which endure, in nature, never attract much attention until they have stood the test of summer's heat and winter's cold, with now and then a storm to test their anchorage.

The building of character into a life, is a slow process, and it is impossible to weaken it, in the early stages of development, by hot-house methods, and mistaken kindness.

Some good people are possessed of the notion that if their boys and girls can be safely environed in the home, where amusements are closely censored, and the most of them forbidden, until they can be graduated into the church, that their responsibility ceases, because the children are saved for time and eternity.

While the church has everything to recommend it, and every child from every Christian home of every creed should be enrolled as a member early in life, experience teaches that this is only an aid to character building.

The boy, deprived of innocent amusements during the only period of life when he needs them, usually goes to all extremes to gratify his desires, when he escapes from home restraint, whether in the church or not, and he sometimes goes to the devil, before he comes to himself. There are few mysteries about the dance, that the average girl, in normal condition, from any kind of a home, will not explore before she reaches the age of twenty.

This was the thought which prompted a little group of mothers, the other day, to throw around these girls the protection which neither the home nor the church can supply.

"The Melting Pot" is the name of a play which had a successful run in this country two or three years ago. It was a portrayal of the great melting process going on in this free land all the time, transforming the creeds of all nations, and turning out the finished product—American citizenship. Child life in this land, more than any other, is a cosmopolitan life. Every boy and girl, from every kind of a home, is the equal of companions and good fellowship and comradeship everywhere prevails.

It is unfair either to place them on a pedestal, and inspire the mind with the thought that they are better in any way, than the common herd, for they need the hammering process of close association, to knock off the rough corners, and unless they share it, early in life, it will come to them in the way of hard knocks later on.

The man who claims to live free from temptation, is entitled to no credit for being good, but his possessing usually inspires but little confidence, because character seldom develops in that kind of an atmosphere. The power of resistance is a positive power, but where there is nothing to resist there is nothing to develop, save conceit and egotism.

The greatest battle in which any of us ever engage is the battle within us. The "still small voice" which we call conscience is like a trip-hammer constantly reminding us to do right. If we listen and obey the voice there comes to us in time a clean white character, which defies temptation, like hardened steel.

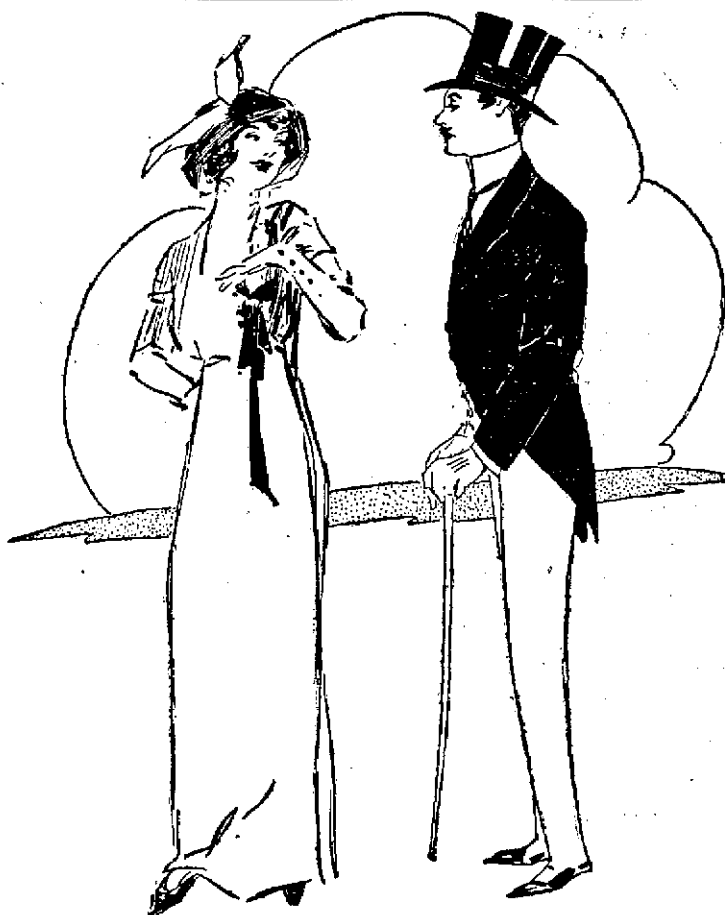

PRESS COMMENT.

Opinion Widely Shared.
It is certainly time for the people of the state to wake up to the fact that our money is being used in a most extravagant manner and an effort should be made to get our money to the legislature from all counties in the state who will not, spend six months or so inventing new fangled laws which cost fortunes to enforce. Too many commissions, whose members have no interest in the state, are being paid to the work they do, say we.—Richland Center Observer.

Reforms at Wausau.
And while the city officials are at the vice regulation business it would be well to stop poultry raffles and look into the illegal sale of cigarettes in the city, especially in those places which cater to and depend upon the patronage of minors. This traffic is having a more demoralizing effect upon the rising generation than any other one thing.—Wausau Record Herald.

Democratic Prospects.
While the next state election is a long way off, it is not too early to have stirred up some of the leaders in all of the parties in the state. The democrats are more hopeful than in any of the parties, and it begins to look as if there was some ground for hope. The tax question, and that is always a thing which stirs men to action, bids fair to bring a heap of abuse upon the dominant party, and create a genuine desire for reform. It matters little whether the next senator is a republican, for the election of a U. S. senator is out of the hands of the state legislature. With a progressive republican candidate, a democrat and a regular republican in the field, even without opposing party candidates, the democrats have more than an even chance, and considering Senator Stephenson's retirement, and the fact that he has not represented the progressive policy of the state or of the nation for that matter, it matters little whether the next senator is a democrat or republican progressive.—Brookfield Register-Independent.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB.

"So you didn't enjoy the club meeting?"
"No, it was very dull."
"Wasn't there a quorum present?"
"Every member was present."
"It should think that would have meant an interesting meeting."
"Silly. With every member present there was no one for us to talk about."

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE

MIGHT MOVE THE WORLD.

If "it belongs to human nature to hate those whom one has injured," as Tacitus says, do we love those whom we have benefited?

Undoubtedly, but how about those who have benefited and are benighted?

If you have a debt of gratitude to pay meet the obligation squarely and manfully. Do not cancel the obligation in a grudging, nigardly, mean spirited manner that leaves your benefactor with a sense of injury.

Possibly the rarest of all the graces is the ability to express gratitude easily. How hauntingly the words of thanks come from the tongue! How we hate to tell our fellow man who has done something for us that we feel ourselves under an obligation to him!

It was always thus. A century and a half ago Dr. Johnson wrote:

"There are minds so impatient of inferiority that their gratitude is a species of revenge, and they return benefits not because recompense is a pleasure, but because obligation is a pain."

Let not obligation be a thorn in your side. If you ARE obliged to a fellow man—and all of us are at one time or another—when it comes to saying so—say so without affectation, without hesitation, without "impatience of inferiority."

Did it ever occur to you that save for the labor and patience of others we should all perish of want? We are dependent and interdependent, not independent.

For you and for me the cool laborers in the rice fields of China, the fisherman faces the storms and hardships of the icy north seas, the sponge gatherer plunges into the deep.

Are they not, in virtue of our dependence on them and our gratitude to them, our brothers?

Were the world fully aroused to the sense of the interdependence of man, wars would cease. Man to man, the world over, would feel that all are members of one big family.

And, the gratitude that we should pay freely for all that is done for us—granted even that it is done in each case with a selfish motive—would be the force that should lift mankind to a higher, better plane.

Fire Set by Mirror.

A piece of mirror that had been thrown away set fire to some grass in the yard of J. B. Crow and the fire crept up and caught in his house. The mirror had been broken in moving and the glass was all taken out and dumped with a pile of tin cans, old shoes and similar junk in a low place about 70 feet from the house. One piece of the mirror was exposed so that it caught the rays of the sun.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

HOUSEKEEPERS Must be Watchful

For great efforts are being made in this vicinity to sell baking powders of inferior class, made from alum acids and lime phosphates, both undesirable to those who require high-grade cream of tartar baking powder to make clean and healthful food.

The official Government tests have shown Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful, grape cream of tartar baking powder, of highest strength, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world.

What He Would Say.

A Scotch minister took pity upon an Irish laborer toiling in the ditch on a hot summer's day, and, fetching the bottle and a glass, refreshed Pat with a glass of whisky. Pat was exuberant in his expressions of thanks. "Begorra, sir," he said, "it's good; it's just to me like mother's milk to an infant." "But what would the priest say," said the minister, "if he knew that I was giving you this drink?" "Begorra, sir," said Pat, "what would he say now, but just this—'Give him another.'"

Would Bar the Speeches.

A member of parliament enlivened a political club luncheon by telling the story of a certain famous politician who attended a banquet at which it was expected important speeches would be made. A dish of whitebait was set before him and, after looking at the fish and then at the other guests he remarked: "Gentlemen, let us follow the example of these little fish—drink a good deal, and say nothing!"

Thunderstorms and Lightning.

In the United States thunderstorms are four or five times as frequent east of the Rocky mountains as west, omitting from consideration parts of Arizona and New Mexico. This is due to the generally mountainous condition of the west. Lightning is most frequent in Florida and Illinois.

Industry Always a Refuge.

"Some temptations come to the industrious," said Spurgeon once, "but all temptations come to the idle." The old and good remedy against a besetting sin is to leave neither time nor room for it anywhere in life, and so crowd it out steadily and surely from its old place and power."

When You Need a Short Smoke

There are intervals day and night when you feel the need of a short smoke. Between lunch and business. Between office and home. Between trains. Between calls. Between acts. Between courses. Cigars are a long smoke—and cost too much to throw away. It is for just these little intervals that we suggest these little cigars. They are identical in quality to the brands whose respective names they bear.

QUESTION OF TASTE AS TO IMPROVEMENT OF CEMETERY CHAPEL

Some Lot Owners at Oak Hill Cemetery Object to Colonial Red Brick Porch on Gray Gothic Stone Structure.

Apparently a question of taste in constructing a red brick porch on the front of the old gothic stone chapel at the Oak Hill cemetery has been raised by some of the owners of lots in the plot and a delegation of them consulted with Secretary William Sherer of the Cemetery Association Friday relative to stopping the work on the proposed porch until the ideas of others might be obtained on the question. Mr. Sherer stated this afternoon that the work would not be stopped, that the porch had been made to the combination of the red brick, which is a dark faced red, to be trimmed with Bedford stone with cement steps, but that he expected it would be finished as originally planned. The plans and specifications were at his store, where anyone who wished to see them could do so. He also stated that the stone of which the chapel had been constructed had come from the Milwaukee quarry, which was never closed and even if it obtained it would be much lighter than the rest of the building and he thought the material to be used would be as pleasing in the end as though the original stone had been made to the color of the lot owners who objected to the red brick porch have asked that all lot owners interested in the matter view the building themselves to form their own opinion as to whether it is a difference in the color of the stone or the matter be taken up by the board of directors whether it shall be completed as planned or other material used. One of the directors, however, stated this afternoon that he thought the best way to decide the question would be to call a public meeting of the lot owners and let them decide it for themselves. Meanwhile all are urged to form their opinion of the question by a personal view.

PUT UP HARD FIGHT TO PREVENT ARREST

August Hitchfield, Austrian Laborer, Gets Fine of $50 or Ninety Days for Resisting Officer.

August Hitchfield, an Austrian employed at the sugar factory, gave the police the hardest fight last night after they had arrested him for disturbing the peace in many a day. Hitchfield created quite a disturbance in the bar at the Metropolitan hotel and Officer Fanning was called in to place him under arrest. He refused to accompany him, but after a hard battle in which assistance was given the officer by Roy W. McKey, the laborer was taken into a delivery automobile and conveyed to the station. When Hitchfield appeared in court this morning to answer a charge of resisting an officer he bore prominent marks of the fray of which he confessed not to have the slightest memory.

A plea of guilty was entered by Hitchfield after he had consulted with his attorney, Edward H. Peterson, and Judge Maxfield sentenced him to pay a fine of $50 and costs or go to jail for ninety days. He was not able to pay the fine at the present time but his friends may come to his assistance.

When Hitchfield last appeared in court it was as plaintiff and not as defendant. He had appeared as a Mr. Brennan who was convicted of stealing a suit of clothes from him and was sentenced to a year's imprisonment in the state's prison at Waupun.

NINETY DAYS FLAT TERM OF REPEATER

Mike O'Gara Lapses From Good Behavior Just After Serving Out a Ten Days Sentence.

With the purpose of discouraging the practice of repeating, Judge Maxfield this morning sentenced Mike O'Gara to ninety days at hard labor, offering no alternative of a fine. O'Gara had just finished serving a ten days term and attempted to renew his acquaintance with the spirits over whom he is no longer master. John Fogarty, a big printer hailing from Bloomington, Illinois, and who came to this city from Madison, Wisconsin, pleaded guilty to intoxication and in default of a fine of $15 and costs was sent to jail for an equal number of days. John Higgins, a farm laborer, pleaded guilty to the same charge and was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs or go to jail for thirty days. His recent employer may come to his assistance.

REV. C. J. KOERNER OFFERS TO RESIGN

Decides to Leave Pastorate of St. Paul's German Lutheran Church—Now on Trip East.

The Rev. C. J. Koerner, for twenty-two years pastor of St. Paul's German Lutheran church, has tendered his resignation to the board of trustees of the church who will probably take action upon it at a meeting tomorrow. The Rev. Koerner made known his intentions before leaving on a trip to New York Thursday morning. He is accompanied on the journey by his son, Harry Koerner of Jefferson, and they will visit his son, George, in the metropolis and, another son, John, in Washington. They will be gone about two weeks and during this time the pulpit of St. Paul's will be occupied by the Rev. Theo. Bretschger of Beloit. It is the intention of the Rev. and Mrs. Koerner to move to Jefferson where they will make their home with their son, Harry, who is proprietor of a drug store there. The reasons for the resignation have not yet been made public.

Real Tango Dance At Apollo Theatre

An Added Attraction Will Be Given

The real Tango Dance of which so much has been said will be danced on the stage of the Apollo Theatre tonight and Sunday by Miss Mabel Hite and Charles Rellow, two very clever dancers who have danced the Tango on Broadway. Everyone should see this wonderful dance as it is actually given true to life. The dance will come as finale to the school act.

There is an extra good program on for tonight and Sunday in addition to the dance. To the lovers of music the Mite Sisters are proving a real treat. These young ladies have talent in abundance, Miss Anna is a violinist of great ability and Miss Adeline does much credit on the cello to her instructor, Prof. Gruetzmacher of Cologne.

Campbell and MacDonald present bits of character singing and dancing. Their voice blend is really producing a very pretty combination.

Schoen's Ruff House Kids keep the audience in laughter from beginning to end. It is one of the funniest school acts ever seen here.

M. J. Gary and daughter of Chicago, are spending the week end at the home of Thomas Rutter.

PLEASING PROGRAM GIVEN LAST NIGHT

Second of Series in C. W. Best Concert Course, Presented at Presbyterian Church.

If the succeeding numbers in the C. W. Best concert course, two of which have been given at the Presbyterian church under the auspices of the Young Men's club, are equal to those programs which have been presented, Janesville will have this year a very superior series of entertainments. The second of the programs given last evening by Miss Sara Paine, pianist and player of the flute; Miss Vesta Lister, soprano; and Miss Florence Smith, reader, proved highly pleasing and hardly a number escaped an encore. Miss Paine is a skilled musician who plays with careful expression. Miss Smith was equally effective in both humorous and comic readings and displayed excellent control of her voice. The singing of Miss Lister displayed a voice of rare quality and good tone.

All three young ladies have a pleasing stage presence. One of the most appreciated numbers on the program was the vocal solo, "A Perfect Day," with piano accompaniment and flute solo. The Holland sketch was a novelty which won favor by its quaint and pretty Dutch costumes, sprightly dialogue, and interwoven musical selections.

Virge Maxfield to Continue Experiment Which Was Impromptu Thursday Evening.

Night sessions of the municipal court, or at least Saturday night sessions, may be made a regular feature of the administration of justice in Janesville. The impromptu session Thursday night, at which two drunks were given sentences, proved so satisfactory that Judge Maxfield has decided to experiment further, and there are any drunks or petty offenders placed under arrest this afternoon or early in the evening, they will be brought before him at ten o'clock tonight.

There are several advantages in a night session of court, according to Judge Maxfield. It will make it unnecessary for a man placed under arrest on Saturday afternoon or evening to remain in jail all night. It is unable to pay his fine. If a man is arrested any other day in the week he can pay his fine and get to work on time the next day. If he can not pay his fine he can go to work and make up his commitment law without any delay. At the present time when all drunks are brought up in the morning, it is often necessary to hold a prisoner for a day before he can be brought to court. Should night court sessions be made regular the time of the morning session would be changed from 9 to 10 o'clock.

COMPLETE ASPHALT MACADAM PAVEMENT

Contractors Brown and Connors Finish Work on South Division Street—Block of Brick

Contractors Brown and Connors have completed laying asphalt macadam pavement on South Division street between St. Lawrence avenue and Oakdale street, a distance of three blocks, two of them being heavy grades. The appearance of the street has been greatly enhanced and the pavement will doubtless outlast any other asphalt macadam in the city, as a better grade of asphalt was used and a good coat applied to the surface. This is sufficiently plastic so that the traffic will keep the surface smooth and impervious. The contractors will now give their entire attention to laying a brick pavement on North Division street between East Milwaukee street and North First street. Most of the necessary grading has been done. The block between East Milwaukee and Court streets, subject to G. D. Cannon, has been finished.

EGGS AT PREMIUM IN NEW YORK CITY

Strike of Hens Causes Famine in Eggs—Senders Pay Twenty-Five Cents a Dozen.

New York, Nov. 8.—Eggs are so scarce in New York that dealers have put up the retail price to 75 cents a dozen for the best quality and prospects are that they will go from three to five cents a dozen higher. The present wholesale price is 62 cents a dozen, though certain brands of western eggs may be obtained for 43 cents a dozen.

Failure of hens to lay this year and a shortage in the cold storage supply are given by dealers as reasons for the scarcity. With the tariff off on imported eggs many wholesale dealers are planning to bring eggs from abroad to relieve the situation. Norway, Denmark, Russia and Siberia have surplus supplies of eggs which can be bought cheap enough, dealers say, to be sold here at a profit.

Frank Vosburg Marries Miss N. Ryan of Chicago

Frank M. C. Vosburg of this city and Miss Nellie Ryan of 2215 W. Park avenue, Chicago, were married on Wednesday at the parsonage of St. Michael's, Father Burke presiding over the ceremony. Miss Kathryn Ryan, cousin, and David Ryan, brother of the bride were the attending couple.

The wedding was held at the home of the bride's parents, during which they received many beautiful presents.

They will reside at the groom's home on Riverside street, and will be at home after Nov. 12th.

Mr. Vosburg is well and favorably known here, and his many friends extend congratulations.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Thirty Years Ago: Thirty years ago today the south wing of the old capitol building at Madison fell. Five men were killed and twenty received injuries. The building was in the course of construction and the killed and injured were mostly masons and laborers.

Birthday Party: Miss Mildred Parker, 103 South Academy street, celebrated her fourteenth birthday Thursday afternoon by giving a party for ten of her school friends. Games were played and a delicious shipman won first prize and Leah Burpee the booby prize. Lunch was served.

FIND PEOPLE GONE FOR SURPRISE PARTY

Last evening seven congenial card playing couples residing in the second ward decided to surprise a neighbor whose birthday was yesterday.

It was all hurriedly planned, the women all deciding to bring something in the way of a lunch, and not one word was to be said to the to-be-surprised couple. Just a walk-in-and-spend-the-evening affair.

It started to work beautifully. Cakes were all made, phones were rung, plans were made, perfected. In the meantime friend husband comes home and suggests to his wife that as it's her birthday they catch the seven o'clock car to Beloit and spend the evening with her sister. This they do, and the congenial souls, carrying cakes and cards and planning how surprised the couple will be, ring the front door bell—and waited.

No, they're not waiting yet, but the next time they decide to surprise party they will see to it that they are not the ones on which the real surprise is sprung.

DETAINED FOR THEFT MADE ONE YEAR AGO

Roy Leonard, Accused of Robbing Till in Silver Moon Saloon, Held for Examination.

Roy Leonard, a former bartender in the Silver Moon saloon on North Main street, charged with robbing the cash drawer there of $24.25, on May 24, 1912, was placed under arrest at the Railroad hotel in this city at about 1:30 o'clock this morning as the result of good detective work on the part of Night Police Captain Sam Brown. He was arraigned in the municipal court before Judge Maxfield this morning and with the usual consent of District Attorney Burdette and his attorney, Edward J. Peterson, his examination was set for nine o'clock next Tuesday morning.

Leonard appeared to be ready to plead guilty at once and when informed that an offense charged was a felony and that he was entitled to an examination he decided to take advantage of it, or at least take time to consult with a brother who resides in the city and with an attorney.

When questioned by the judge, Leonard said: "I know I made a fool of myself." He said that he had been working as a brakeman in Iowa since leaving Janesville but got on a "toot" and drifted back here. He is said to be a former Burlington resident in default of $500 bail he will await his trial in the custody of Sheriff C. S. Whipple.

Thomas S. Welch, proprietor of the Silver Moon, stated this morning that Leonard had been in the saloon twice before, since the robbery, but that each time he had eluded capture.

JUDGMENT RENDERED FAVOR PLAINTIFFS

Assess Damages in Case of Frank Bennett et al Versus Albert Hafeman at $150.

After being out for more than five hours the jury drawn in the case of Frank Bennett and Daniel Drew versus Albert Hafeman, tried in the circuit court, brought in a verdict at 5:30 p. m. yesterday in which they found for the plaintiffs, assessing their damages in the sum of $150 and interest, less $32.50 damages to the defendant. The case developed out of a sale of a stallion to Hafeman by the plaintiffs at a stipulated price of $150. Hafeman claimed that the animal was a former Darlington resident, and that he had suffered damages by reason of such purchase. The contending parties reside in the town of Plymouth.

LEFT LAST NIGHT FOR DEER HUNTING EXPEDITION

The call of the Red Gods is proving strong among the Janesville hunters, men and J. C. Karberg, John Chase, Charles Sykes, Herman Leichtfuss, Lawrence Nelson and Charles Kruse were among the local nincompoes who left last night for the northern pines in Rusk and Chippewa counties in search of deer.

The hunters expect to be gone about two weeks and expect good results, and to enjoy a good time. They have engaged a well known chef hailing from Vienna, and as the hunters are well acquainted with the woodsmen of the hunting grounds, have promised their friends a share of the venison. Meanwhile their friends are anxiously awaiting their safe return.

WILL THEY CAPTURE STATE TITLE AGAIN?

Several of 1913 Champs Begin Early Workout on Basketball Floor Yesterday—Practice Basket Shooting.

Hemming caged the first basket of the 1913-14 season at the high school gymnasium yesterday afternoon. This line of talk sounds good, although it is a little early to discuss basketball prospects, especially until the local high school squad redeem themselves of the defeats handed them this season.

Hemming, captain for the coming season, together with Atwood and Stewart, succeeded in patching up an old ball, and they determined to test their eyes at basket shooting. They loitered about the gym for about an hour, locating an attorney as much as possible, and finally leaving with hopes of conquering the state title again this year. Why shouldn't they? The present run of things place them a strong favorite, with three old all-state men in the ring, and a sub to develop into a regular. Other material is not scanty by any means.

The Church: Her Glory and Walk

By REV. WILLIAM EVANS, D. D.
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Ephesians (whole Epistle).

The great theme of the Epistle to the Ephesians is the Church—its heavenly calling, its earthly life, its greeting and salutation, its Epistle sets before us its two great divisions: the glorious calling of the Church, chapters 1-3; and the earthly life of the Church, chapters 4-6.

Under the first main division presented to us, the conception of the Church in the mind of God, as an invisible organism which only God can see; in the second main division, the Church as a visible organization, such as the world can see. The bringing together of these two thoughts is the sum total of the message of this book.

Under the conception of the Church we have presented to use first from the divine side, the Church as it was in the mind of God, just as the plans and specifications of a building are in the mind of the architect before a single stone is laid (1:3-14). Second, from the human side: The conception of the Church as it should be in the mind of the Church itself (1:15-23). This division takes the form of a prayer to the Father that the Church may consciously realize and appreciate this divine conception. The object of the prayer is threefold: That believers may know what is the hope of their calling; what the riches of the glory of God's inheritance in his saints; and what the exceeding greatness of his power in those who believe, which power is illustrated in the resurrection and exaltation of Jesus Christ.

Having briefly considered the conception of the Church, let us now glance for a moment at its construction, the account of which we find in chapter 2:1-22. Note here the description of the material out of which the Church is formed, and how this material is described (2:1-12): dead in sin, children of wrath, ruled by Satan, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, without Christ and hopeless, afar off without God, and strangers to the covenant of promise.

The Church is now conceived of as a spiritual structure (2:20-22). Jesus Christ, the apostles and prophets are its chief corner-stone and foundation. Each believer is a living stone in the living temple; each aggregation of believers also constitutes a dwelling place of the Spirit.

The next great point to be considered is the Constitution of the Church, which is set forth in chapter 3:1-21. In this chapter are set forth the personal relations existing between the writer and his readers. In the same connection is declared the kind of people out of which the Church is constructed, not, however, as to the individual, as in chapter 2, but with regard to the two great divisions of mankind: Jew and Gentile.

The second division of the book, namely, the earthly walk of the Church (chapters 4-6), is presented to us in the following fourfold way:

First—There is the walk of the Church, which should be a united walk (4:1-16).

The graces that maintain unity are described as meekness, lowliness, long-suffering, forbearance, love (4:1-3). Then those fundamental unities on which the unity is based are described: one body, one Spirit, one calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God who is over all, through all, in all (4:4-6). The fact is further emphasized that the unity which should characterize the Church is a diversity of gifts (4:7-11). Here are described the various gifts and offices in the possession of the membership of the Church, all of which are bestowed by the Divine Spirit. The end and aim of these gifts is set forth in 4:12-13—they are all to be used for the building up of the body of Christ.

Second—God would have the world see not only a united Church, but also an unblemished membership (4:17-5:21), so he portrays to us vividly the walk of the individual believer, which should be characterized by purity, and consistent with his profession in Christ. The old life is described; then the new life, first in general, second then in detail is set before us in glowing terms.

Third—God would have the world see an ideal family life (5:22-6:9). The walk of the Christian family should be one of reciprocal love and willing service for each other. Here are set before us the relation of husband and wife; parents and children; masters and servants.

Fourth—The dynamic power for the realization of these ideals is described in 6:10-13. The Christian must put on the whole armor of God, which is here delineated piece by piece. Thus armed, victory is certain.

The Epistle concludes with a request for prayer by the apostle and with final salutations, 6:19-24.

Can Tell All About It.
One of the peculiar things in American life is that those who have no finances always know the most about finance.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Easiest Way.
An eminent German professor had the misfortune to die while he was away on his holidays. When the time came to put up a tablet to his memory in the little university town where his life's work had lain, this was the line which the mortuary artist carved upon it: "He died during his absence."—New York Evening Post.

She Does.
"What does this nation need?" shouted the impassioned orator. "What does this nation require, if she steps proudly across the Pacific, if she strides boldly across the mighty ocean in her march of trade and freedom? I repeat, what does she need?" "Rubber boots," suggested the grossly materialistic person in a rear seat.

Like New Store Fronts.
Making over store fronts is an industry which has found so many patrons in New York that a number of firms have found it profitable to set aside all other forms of building and devote themselves wholly to helping New York merchants improve the appearance of their establishments by putting a new face on the matter. All classes of merchants, from the small dealer in the suburb to the great dry goods firms, indulge in the luxury of a new kind of front to their business homes every once in so often.

A CLERGYMAN'S EXPERIENCE

Came Near Losing His Life—How He Escaped.

The following letter was received by The Peruna Co., from Rev. G. W. Roberts, R. R. 2, Box 27, Hartsville, Alabama, under date of April 2, 1904, which is exactly nine years ago. He says: "I take pleasure in informing you of what you Peruna has done for me after three years of suffering. I had tried the treatments of several doctors, also home remedies, but they failed and all hope had gone. My friends, like myself, thought I was in the last stages of consumption. My daughter brought me a bottle of Peruna and plead with me to try it. I had got so weak I had lost my voice, and I thought it no use. That was in May, 1902. I began to take it, according to directions. I wrote to you, and you have given me your kind advice. I soon felt better, my cough began to give way, and the expectation lessened. I have taken fourteen bottles. I feel well, eat hearty, sleep soundly, weigh as much as I ever did, do considerable work on my farm, and attend to my other business. My friends seemed astonished at my recovery. 'I wish to thank you for your kind advice and the books you have sent me. I shall ever praise your medicine and hope that you may enjoy a long life.' It will be observed that Rev. Roberts waited two years after he began to use Peruna, before he wrote the above letter to The Peruna Co. So that his apparent recovery could not possibly have been temporary relief. In a letter to the Peruna Co., dated September 22, 1906, Rev. Roberts says: 'I am a great friend of Peruna. By the use of Dr. Hartman's advice I am here today, able to be with my family and attend to my business.'"

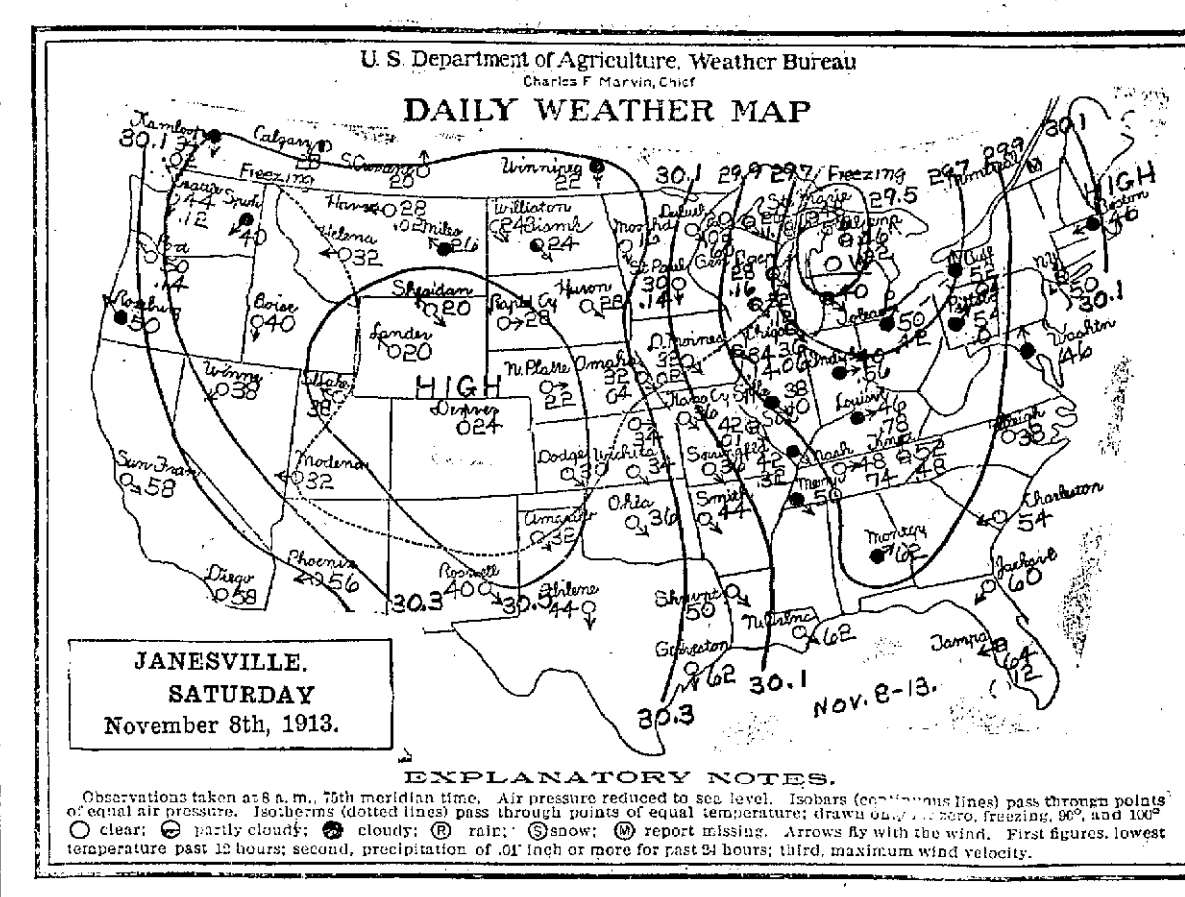

We quote from another letter, dated December 10, 1906: "I praise Peruna to all the sick. The people know my case, and they praise it also." In a letter dated November 22, 1909, we quote Rev. Roberts: "Peruna gave me back my life ten years ago. All my acquaintances know that. I am certainly thankful to you for your kindness." In a later letter, dated January 13, 1910, he says: "I shall ever in the future, as in the past, be ready to speak in praise of Peruna to all sufferers. I believe my miraculous cure has been the means of many others being cured in this country." From a letter of September 5, 1911, we quote a few words: "I am still among the living. As to Peruna, I do not feel that I have words to express the faith I have in its merits. I feel that Peruna has been the means, through the kind providence of God, of prolonging my life for more than ten years." We quote from his last letter, dated January 2, 1912: "Dear Friends: I wish this bright New Year to express my thanks to you for your kindness. Trusting that you may have a successful and happy year, and that your medicine may prove a blessing to many as it has to me, I am yours as ever, G. W. Roberts, Hartsville, Alabama, R. F. D. 2, Box 27." It is not necessary for us to add any words to this story. The eloquence and pathos of these letters are more convincing than arguments or affidavits. Who can doubt the clergyman's story? Who can doubt that Peruna saved his life? Every home should be provided with the last edition of the "Mils of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Your Blood

If impure and debilitated, weak and thin, will surely yield to the purifying and vitalizing powers of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

Every honest physician and pharmacist must admit the value of its formula, which includes not only Sarsaparilla, but also those great Alternatives, Stillingia and Blue Flag; those great Anti-bilious and Liver remedies, Mandrake and Dandelion; those great Kidney remedies, Uva Ursi, Juniper Berries and Pipsissewa; those great Stomach Tonics, Gentian Root and Wild Cherry Bark; and other valuable agents.

With these potent ingredients combined in our own scientific proportions and by our own modern processes—Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses medicinal merit we believe, unequalled in any other medicine.

November 8, 1913.—The storm, the center of which was in the Mississippi valley yesterday, has moved slowly eastward, its center now being over Michigan. Its influence extends from the plains to the Atlantic. Rain has fallen in the eastern and central states, rain turning to snow in the upper Mississippi valley and upper lake region. High winds prevail in the lake region and upper Mississippi valley. It is much warmer on the Atlantic coast, where southerly winds prevail and much colder in the northwest, where the currents flowing into the storm center are from the north-west.

An area of high barometer of great area and intensity occupies the west, and is attended by fair and colder weather.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By
D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted)
From the middle seventies along to about eighty-one with the Burr Robbins show was a man by the name of John R. Moody, whose nom de plume was Diabola, the Fire King. "Dib," as he was known in show business, made the concert announcements in the big show, did his fire eating act in both the concert and the side show, and also his lightning change act, in which he was known as the man with fifty faces. Dib was the most useful man in his line of work that I ever knew and was always on the job. He always had a kind word and a smile for everybody. This was in the wagon show days and on many a dark and rainy night while passing Dib on the road he always had a word of cheer for everyone.

It was back in the fall of '78 after the close of the Burr Robbins Show that Dib and I got together and decided to start on the road with a fall show. I was to be contractor and business manager and Dib was to give the show. This was before the days of moving pictures or museums or cheap shows of any kind. We decided that $4 would be our limit for the halls that we would hire in the smaller towns and the advertising would consist of small doggers. We would only bill the town two or three days ahead and then I would go back and sell the tickets and the owner of the hall would take them and Dib would run the show.

We opened at Milton Junction to a good house for that kind of an inexpensive show and it seemed to please the people fairly well. From there we went to Old Milton and Whitewater, Clinton Junction and then down into a few of the smaller towns in northern Illinois.

We showed in a small town one evening to a fair business, but the hotel was a bad one, very cold and about the same kind of a breakfast and by this time the business did not look any too good to me.

There was a small room off of the office and about 5 o'clock in the morning Dib and I went into this room to talk over the advisability of going any farther. We had just commenced talking over business when the landlord appeared and seemed to be anxious to know what was going on. Dib took a look at him and said, "Landlord, we came in here to talk over the advisability of taking this show south for the winter, and we would like to be left alone." The landlord excused himself and started out, but just as he got to the door he turned half way round and said, "Well, I would think you had better take it some where."

I said to Dib that I thought we were carrying too many people with the show to make any money and that I thought I would start for Janesville. Dib said he would go on a few days longer, bill the show one day and show the next and a little later he would run into Janesville for the winter. This he did and made in a few days something like $90 or $100 and did all the work and gave the show himself. But it would take more than this kind of a show to satisfy the people even at the low price of fifteen cents admission, for it is possible now to see some good shows for that price. And this was the only time that I ever was in the show business as one of the proprietors.

Frequent mention of Joe Hepp's writings, which are a feature of The New York Clipper, has been made in this column. For the benefit of those who do not know who Joe Hepp is, I am proud to announce that he is none other than Aaron A. Patrick, formerly a resident of Janesville, and who obtained his early newspaper schooling in Janesville prior to 1895, when he joined the Ringling Bros. World's Greatest Shows as auditor.

As a matter of fact, I was largely instrumental in starting "Pat" off on his circus career, which extended over a period of twelve years.

Leaving the white tops, after having been identified with a number of America's leading tented aggregations, Pat embarked in the amusement journalistic field. And now, writing under the nom de plume of "Joe Hepp" his department in The New York Clipper, America's oldest amusement journal, which is looked upon as an authority by show people in every branch of the business throughout the world, Patrick has built up a following which must be most gratifying to him and to the publication of which he is the western manager.

In devoting a few lines to Warren A. Patrick, I would fall short of my duty did I not at this time state that he was the founder of the Showmen's League of America, of which he is the secretary, an organization which includes in its membership the brightest minds in the tent show field of this country. Colonel W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) is the president, and Colonel Charles W. Parker of Leavenworth, Kansas, is the treasurer.

In the realm of entertainments, in many of its branches, Janesville has played an important part in furnishing men of ability. Modesty precludes extended mention of what I have done in the circus field, but I grasp this opportunity to give Warren A. Patrick due credit for the part he has played in the amusement business of America.

As is well known his writings circulate throughout the universe, wherever entertainment is offered, and Joe Hepp's department is one of the most interesting features published.

I have the honor of being a charter member of The Showmen's League of America, and I thoroughly appreciate what a wonderful work this organization will perform. Long after Warren A. Patrick has passed out, the name of Joe Hepp will linger in the minds of the tent show people, and his fellow-townsmen here will rejoice in the part he has played towards the uplift of the amusement business, and the care of indigent showmen who spent their lives in active service on the tent show lots.

A few days ago I received the following letter from an old Janesville boy who is now an engineer for the Northwestern road and makes his home in Chicago:

Chicago, Oct. 20th, 1913.
Mr. D. W. Watt,
Dear Sir:—Your interesting articles in the Gazette on show life I read with great pleasure.

I have a collection of theatrical programs and circus bills dating from 1870. It is interesting to learn from your articles the whereabouts of the old celebrities.

I have them in scrap book form and I cut out the death notices from the papers and paste over the bills containing the name of the deceased.

I would like to have you tell of the origin and whereabouts of the one time famous "Wild Men of Borneo." I saw them in 1896 and again in Janesville in about 1877 with the Barnum show. I have photographs of them at both times I saw them.

I see you noticed the death of John Dillon, who used to be the greatest attraction of any traveling comedian forty-five years ago at Leavin's Hall and Myers Opera House. Was it not a misprint to call him a circus performer?

I have the program of "Buffalo Bill's" first hall show in the play called "Mary Cody," given in Janesville, I think in the seventies.

I was never in any way connected with the show business; I merely take an interest in such things or rather did years ago.

I am an engineer on the C. & N. W. road and lived in Janesville from 1898 until 1906, and take the Gazette and read your "Side Lights" and take the liberty of asking you about those two strange little men.

I have old bills of Burr Robbins, W. W. Cole, the Comed Show in 1883, Barnum and Bailey years ago, and I treasure them highly. If you would care to see them I would be pleased to show them to you at my home.

I remain, yours truly,
CHARLES T. STARNES,

THE SMASH-UP

BY ELSIE ENDICOTT.

It was a fine morning in the town of Janesville, Wis., Nov. 8, 1913. The sun was shining brightly, and the air was fresh and cool. The people were out and about, enjoying the day. In the center of the town, on the main highway, a car was driving. It was a new car, and it was being driven by a young man. He was looking at the road, and he was driving carefully. Suddenly, the car stopped. The young man looked out of the window, and he saw a horse-drawn carriage. The carriage was in the middle of the road, and it was being driven by an old man. The young man saw that the carriage was in the way, and he decided to turn it around. He turned the car around, and he drove back. The old man saw that the car was coming back, and he decided to get out of the way. He got out of the carriage, and he ran. The young man saw that the old man was running, and he decided to stop. He stopped the car, and he got out. He saw that the old man was running towards him, and he decided to help him. He ran towards the old man, and he helped him. The old man was very grateful, and he thanked the young man. The young man was very kind, and he helped the old man. The old man was very old, and he was very weak. The young man was very young, and he was very strong. The young man was very kind, and he helped the old man. The old man was very grateful, and he thanked the young man. The young man was very kind, and he helped the old man. The old man was very grateful, and he thanked the young man.

POOR QUALITY HOGS CAUSE SLOW MARKET

Prices Hold at Yesterday's Average for All Grades of Livestock.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Hogs of poor quality were offered on the market this morning and a rather heavy run for Saturday resulted in a slow and sluggish market. Prices held up to Friday's level, however, for sheep and cattle as well as hogs, although packers showed an indifferent attitude. Following are quotations:

Proper Sense of Humor.

The sense of humor is like individuality; it is likely to be disagreeable to others if made too prominent. It is a dangerous gift, so dangerous that the person who lacks it may perhaps be congratulated. They do not know what they miss, but they are likely to be the solid, sensible citizens, the men of means, and the directors of public affairs.

Balaam's Ass.

Once upon a time a correspondent wrote to the editor of a religious paper asking whether he believed that Balaam's ass really spoke. The editor replied: "The Bible says so, and therefore we believe it, and we would say further that if everyone who undertakes to throw discredit on the Bible story would, whenever he opened his mouth, speak only half as wisely or half as well as the ass did, we should not have so much nonsense uttered as we have now to listen to."

Oranges are at a premium on the market at the present time and the dealers are refusing to handle them in great quantities because of the high cost, this being the odd season. They are selling in prices ranging from forty to sixty cents per dozen and are of poor quality. Bananas are appearing on the market in greater quantities at present than for some time and when the shipments of green fruit are marketable the price will be lowered. Excellent Hubbard squash, parsnips, carrots and turnips are on the dealers' stands selling at two cents per pound. The quality of the cranberries continues to improve with every shipment and are selling at ten cents per pound.

CATHOLICS STOP MRS. MONTEFIORE

Mrs. Dora Montefiore.

Mrs. Dora Montefiore, prominent in philanthropic circles in London, has been arrested in Dublin on a charge of kidnapping Dublin children. The strike in Dublin is causing great suffering among the poor and Mrs. Montefiore sought to have some of the children removed to England, where they could be taken care of until the trouble had subsided. Catholic priests secured the arrest of Mrs. Montefiore. They believe she would attempt to make Protestants of the children if successful in getting them to England.

MEDIOCRE SHOWING MADE AT ATHLETIC MEET FOR GERMANY

First Intercollegiate Contest Held at Leipzig Disclosed No Hidden
Talent for Olympic Meet.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, Nov. 8.—The first intercollegiate athletic meet ever held in Germany took place at Leipzig during the recent festivities connected with the centennial of the "Battle of Nations."

Dr. Alvin C. Krenzelin, the old American hurdler and bronze jumper, now in charge of the development of German athletics for the Olympic games here in 1916, was present, but if he hoped to discover any hidden talent for the German team in 1916 he was disappointed. All the events on the short program, except the high jump, were won by athletes already well known in the student sections of the regular athletic clubs, and judging by the performances, a team picked from all the talent at the meeting would stand little show of winning at an average dual meet between leading American colleges.

The events and performances were as follows: The performances at the Stockholm games being inserted in parentheses for purposes of comparison: 100 meter dash Kern of Munich, time 10.45 second (Lippencott, America, 10.55); 400 meters, Hermann of Berlin, time 53 second (Reidjann, America, 48.15); 1,500 meter run, Hoffmann of Charlottenburg, time 4.17-4.5 (Jackson, England, 3.56-4.5).

RATTLE THE ARMOR OF CIVIL STRIFE

Andrew Bonar Law (top) and Sir Edward Carson.

Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the opposition in the English house of commons, has pledged his support to the Unionist party in Ulster, Ireland, led by Sir Edward Carson, which is opposed to Irish home rule. Law says he will join with Carson in a civil war should the present Irish home rule be passed unamended.

110 meter hurdles, Hatt, Munich, time 17.25 seconds (Kelly, America, 15.5 seconds); high jump, Leibelich of Stuttgart, 5 feet 7.13 inches (Richards, America, 5 feet 4 inches); broad jump, Hasen of Charlottenburg, 22 feet 11.5 inches (Guterson, America, 21 feet 11.5 inches); pole vault, Pophmann of Charlottenburg, 10 feet 6 inches (Sabcock, America, 12 feet 11.12 inches); discus throw, Bueckgeister of Charlottenburg, 132 feet 4.12 inches (Taipale, Finland, 148 feet 4 inches).

Only a comparative handful of the thousands of university students in Germany competed, and there were only a few hundred spectators, those including Prince Johann George of Saxony, and the rector of the University of Leipzig. Several of the winners in this first meet, notably Kern, Hasen and Bueckgeister, may be expected to develop Olympic class in Dr. Krenzelin's hands. The American trainer is devoting himself with energy to the building up of a system to make the most of the admittedly good German raw material in the short two and a half years before the games. At a meeting of the German committee on athletics, held during the Leipzig meet, he declared that German efforts must be directed first toward bringing out the developing latent talent, and secondly toward inducing promising athletes to specialize instead of scattering their energies over a dozen events in as many different sports.

Next year will be devoted to finding and assembling as many candidates for the team as possible, who will be brought to Berlin during the summer at the expense of a committee, lodged at the stadium, fed at a regulation American "training table" and put through a regular course of training similar to that of an American college athlete. The program for the year starts with cross-country club runs April 5, held in every city in which there are two or more athletic clubs, followed on May 5 by similar simultaneous competitions for novices. Olympic elimination meets will be held May 24, the athletes thus selected will compete at provincial or sectional meets during June, which Dr. Krenzelin will attend to pick his candidates for the course of training at the stadium.

Proposes Drastic Measures.
"Emperor William should arrest his son, the crown prince, and shut him up in a fortress," is the drastic remedy suggested by a Berlin weekly as the best solution of the situation created by the crown prince in taking a stand against the Emperor in the matter of the accession of Prince Ernest August of Cumberland to the throne of Brunswick.

The editor's suggestion recalls the fact that Frederick the Great, when crown prince, was actually arrested and kept under strict surveillance by his father, King Frederick William I, and that the old emperor, William I, wished to send his son, later Emperor Frederick, to a fortress castle. The present conflict between father and son is, in fact, an old Hohenzollern tradition that has been handed down with striking regularity from one generation of the dynasty to the next. These conflicts have, however, lost much of their sharpness. Nevertheless, it is only sixty-three years since the old Emperor William, at a time when he was still heir apparent to the throne, of Prussia, during his ward to the ground before his brother, King Frederick William IV., with the bitter remark: "Nobody can honestly serve longer under you." Hardly ten years had elapsed when William himself, as crown prince, afterwards Emperor Frederick, at variance with him and siding with the Diet in refusing to make heavy military appropriations.

It is a well-known fact that the present emperor himself was, during the brief hundred days reign of his dying father, vigorously opposed to him in many of his measures, and William did not hesitate to show this by a complete change of policies as soon as he ascended the throne. All things considered, therefore, the present conflict between the emperor and the crown prince is but a mild repetition of the old Hohenzollern tradition.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE DEFEATS UNIONIST

Close Election at Lithgowshire, Scotland, Results in Another Defeat for James Kidd.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Lithgow, Scotland, Nov. 8.—Mr. Pratt, the liberal candidate for Lithgowshire, was successful over the unionist opponent, James Kidd, but by a greatly reduced majority at the bye-election held here yesterday. The figures as given out today were Pratt, liberal, 5,615; Kidd, unionist, 5,094. Pratt's majority was 521.

At the last election Alexander Ure, liberal, had 2,000 majority. Mr. Ure vacated the seat a few weeks ago on his appointment as lord president of the Scottish court of sessions and it was difficult for the liberals to find a candidate to replace him, but Mr. Pratt, who was a former ballie of Glasgow, and practically unknown to the constituency, was selected to meet the unionist, James Kidd, who had been before the electors for years. The contest was vigorously fought. The result makes no difference to the strength of parties in the house of commons.

ENGLISH SUFFRAGE ADVOCATES ATTACK CABINET OPPONENTS

Will Support Certain Labor Party
Candidates Who Expect to Direct the Campaign.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 8.—The opening gun of the busy autumn campaign of the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, the constitutional organization of the suffragists, will be fired in November in the form of a concerted attack on the constituencies of the cabinet members who oppose women's enfranchisement.

This preliminary attack will take the form of political support of certain labor candidates, who expect to oppose the anti-suffrage cabinet members at the next general election. The government is being attacked because although it has a majority in favor of women's suffrage, it refuses to make their enfranchisement a government measure. The Labor party will be assisted because it is, so far, the only party which has placed women's suffrage in its official platform. The Union itself is non-partisan, embracing members from all the parties, but it is the considered opinion of the suffragists that the hand of the government should be forced by opposing its anti-suffrage adherents.

The educational side of the campaign is to be concentrated on an effort to show the public the clearness of one at least of the reasons why the Union desires the enfranchisement of women. This reason will be expressed in terms of the welfare of children. A program has been arranged under the general title of "The Child and the State." The campaign will be carried on under the various heads of infant mortality, children in the schools, defective children, delinquent children, state children, employment of children, and the legal position of children.

The Reason Why.
The police have been subjected to considerable criticism for the small number of arrests they made at the recent Bow Baths riot in the East End, when Sylvia Pankhurst was rescued by her followers, but modestly has prevented the London policeman from coming forward with a perfectly adequate excuse for his small surchargeable bag.

The story of the newest form of militant strategy might never have been made public had not some of the victorious suffragettes boasted about it to their friends. According to these fighters every time a London policeman grasped a suffragette one of her comrades, told off for that purpose, would rip open the officer's coat and cut his suspenders. Torn between conflicting senses of duty and modesty the constable had to sacrifice his capture or his dignity, and everyone knows the London "bobby" will guess that the prisoner escaped.

The troubles of the much-abused police did not end with the escape of their prisoners, for when they were lined up before the inspector to render off duty, they got a rating for their failure to stand at attention with hands at their sides. The chaffing of their comrades in the station house, when they discovered the cause for this slackness, did not add to their happiness.

It is said that when Miss Pankhurst was arrested the next night at Poplar Hall, the captors had provided for a repetition of the attack by anchoring their trousers so securely that a mere snipping of the suspenders did not cause them any concern.

Contrast Between Queens.
Never was a greater contrast between two Queens afforded than the presence together of Queens Mary and Alexandra at the marriage of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife.

Although common report says the two women are not on the most friendly terms, custom demands that at many functions they appear together, and at the marriage at St. James Palace they both entered and left the chapel hand in hand. Of the two in fact, Queen Alexandra, who will be sixty-nine on December 1 next, and is therefore twenty-three years older than her daughter-in-law, appears the younger, but when she walks her age is more apparent. Her face, too, is always brightened by a smile, which no doubt accounts for her never-waning popularity with the general public, who always cheer her more heartily than any members of the royal family. With the possible exception of the Duke of Cornwall, with whom she divides honors in this respect.

Leaving the chapel the other day it was noticed that the Queen Mother, with that tact for which both she and King Edward were famous, suggested to how to all present, so that none might feel slighted. In fact she was so persistent in this that Queen Mary had more than once to gently urge her forward.

Yachting Gossip.
Yachtsmen who followed the races around British Isles and in continental waters during the past season tell an incident which emphasizes the thoroughness with which Charles Nicholson, the designer of new American cup challenger, carries out everything he undertakes.

It occurred aboard the "Istria," which won the 15-metre race at Kiel last year. Nicholson not only designed and built but also skinned the "Istria" in her big races. On the occasion mentioned the yacht was late in getting under way for the starting point and a friendly steam yacht gave her a line. Those on the steam yacht soon learned the cause of the "Istria's" lateness. Perched above the cross-trees was Nicholson, the designer, builder and skipper, making sure that some bolts were quite right before the race.

Nicholson is probably the least worried of the men interested in the big race of next year. Asked the other day whether he was not kept busy on "Shamrock IV," he shook his head and said "It does not worry me. It is just a question of building another yacht, but only it is a little larger." Despite this Nicholson can be depended upon to see that every thing possible is done to win the cup, no matter how much work and consideration it takes.

THE GAMBLER PROVES DRAWING QUALITIES

Jack Bessey Company Continue Record Breaking Run at Myers' With Play "The Gambler."

"The Gambler" left a decided impression upon the large audience who witnessed the four act society drama given by the Jack Bessey Stock Company at the Myers Theatre last evening. The drama was the best acted and delivered among those that the company has given from the Jamesville stage.

The part of Jack Diamond proved one that required skillful acting and was carried by Jack Bessey to a state of perfection. His reciting the emotional parts was intense and carried the audience with him at all stages. Neil Paul continued her star abilities in stock company playing under the cast of Annie Demmon, wife of Jack Diamond, the gambler. Much to the surprise of the majority of those who attended, the gambler proved to be the hero of the tale, after act one, in which Annie Demmon declares her love for Jack Diamond, notorious gambler, and marries him in spite of family and friendly opposition. After marriage the neglected wife is unhappy and is enticed to leave her husband by an unfaithful friend. Fate plays a big card in the lives of the two and brings them together after William Graham is killed in a "popham," a tramp, whom Graham had wronged.

Quo Vadis Pictures.

Since George Kleine made his enormous success of the Cines photo-drama "Quo Vadis," a host of other imitators have entered the field of competition. However, as the Kleine production includes eight wonderful reels and is only produced in the high class theatres of the country and has never been leased to the ordinary picture houses, the general public have been quick to discriminate between the big and the little "Quo Vadis." In the big cities of the East, Mr. Kleine's production was taken up by fashionable society and theatre parties of the "four hundred" were a frequent occurrence at the Astor Theatre in New York. The George Kleine production of "Quo Vadis" will be the attraction at the Myers Theatre on Thursday, Nov. 20, for 3 days, with matinees daily. The entertainment covers two hours and fifteen minutes. The seat sale begins Wednesday, Nov. 19.

Lillian Russell.
Lillian Russell is to be the main attraction at the Myers Theatre Thursday, Nov. 25, where a bill of play of unusual merit is to be seen in John Cort's Feature Festival, heralded as the costliest theatrical amusement on tour in America. The Pittsburgh Press thus alludes to Miss Russell's latest work: "That the famous prima donna has lost none of her popularity was demonstrated by two large and enthusiastic audiences which attended yesterday. She sang her famous songs charmingly, and her reception here was most hearty." Mr. Cort will present in the same company with his famous star forty celebrated specialty artists whose acts will be accompanied by a special orchestra carried by the Cort organization.

A man wrote a novel named "Queed," a volume most charming, indeed, it was witty and sweet, and a hard one to beat, a book that all people might read. And the people, they gladly upriz, and purchased that volume of his, till the publishers smiled o'er the money they plied, and the booksellers murmured "Que whiz!" Then the author, he V. V.'S EYES said, through his hat: "I will write something better than that! A book that's profound, with a moral so sound it will ar up the vile plutocrat!" So he wrote about Vivian's Eyes, a book that's supposed to be wise; but it fills me with woe, for it's dreary and slow, and flat as our boarding house pies. I grumble and groan as I read, surprised that the author of "Queed," a book that's a peach—should rear up and preach, when humor's the stuff that we need. And here is a man who can make you laugh till your innards will ache. He sidetracks his gift in order to drift around in the muck with his rake. He should be arrested and fined for using his wonderful mind to turn out a book, or a sermon, gadzook! That any old has been could grind. Get back to your base, gifted man! Pursue your original plan! Help people to smile and get rid of their bile, and cheer up the world while you can!

SHORTHAND USED BY ROMANS.
The art of shorthand was practiced from antiquity. It was improved by the poet Ennius, by Tyro, Cicero's freeman, and Seneca. The "Ars Scribendi Characteris," written about 1412, is the oldest system extant. Dr. Timothy Bright's "Characteris, or the Art of Short, Swift and Secret Writing," published in 1588, is the first English work on shorthand.

LITTLE CONSOLATION FROM THE ELECTIONS

OLD GANGS ARE TRIUMPHANT IN THREE LARGE CITIES OF COUNTRY.

MINORITY IN SADDLE

Democratic Vote in Massachusetts Small Proportion of Number Cast—Sprague in England.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, Nov. 8.—The elections have given great satisfaction to President Wilson and his local followers, and there are those who say that the cause of good municipal government has had a tremendous boost. I wish I could be as oblivious to facts as I am sure that next to the man who always enjoys himself, the man who can go unprotected into a rainstorm and not get wet, is to be congratulated. The New York city election was the result of Old Father Knickerbocker's being forced to take a powerful emetic. Certainly the "vindication" of the confessed "toucher" Sulzer is no triumph of good morals. It was simply a case where even the old Knickerbocker's stomach couldn't stand the strain any longer. It may be hoped that Sulzer has been an instrument, though a dirty one, to bring New York to a realizing sense of the utter degradation and moral decay of her whole government, city and state. The old Republican gang in Philadelphia is triumphant, and the Democratic Taggart gang in Indiana has been completely routed. Surely the political analyst and uplifter who finds joy, both going and coming, on this checker-board, is a person of infinite adaptability. He wouldn't have to wade through a graveyard.

There is a lesson in the Massachusetts election that is more important than this, and it applies equally to New Jersey, and needs especial emphasis in Wisconsin. Four principal candidates for governor and two or three others of minor account polled a total vote of approximately 450,000. Walsh, whose election is pointed to as a Democratic victory, got 180,368 votes. The other candidates, taken together, polled 269,631 votes. This is a voting population, reckoned by U. S. Census rules, of 1,032,000. So the whole vote polled on Tuesday represented less than 45 per cent of the state's electors. The winner achieves success representing less than 17 per cent of the voting population of the Old Bay State. If that is regarded as a victory for any principle except political confusion and inertia the fellow who can believe it should have the honor. Why, twenty-one years ago Massachusetts cast 176,812 votes for Grover Cleveland, and polled almost 400,000 votes. Still Walsh got more votes in Massachusetts than Mr. Wilson received there, last year.

Speaking of votes, reminds me of an interview with Mrs. Pankhurst, by a Free Press reporter in this city, on Wednesday last. It is important because it expresses some things that many Americans do not understand about the suffrage situation in England.

"But, Mrs. Pankhurst," the reporter asked, "Do you believe that you will better off by merely increasing the number of votes by half? Do you think you will be able to change things by merely doubling the number of voters?"

"That is not our intention—to merely double the number of voters," she replied. "We want to introduce a new element to the ballot box. We want a new kind of voter, so to speak. We could get more voters by enfranchising about 3,000,000 men who are not allowed to vote in England as it is. That is not our object."

"We want to raise the standard of the vote by letting the mother, the home builder, and the reaper of children have a say in the quantity that we want, but quality."

Here is a frank admission that the English have no such thing as universal suffrage, and that even the militant women have no idea of asking "equal" suffrage. They are merely engaged in a class movement, like the labor leaders. It really means nothing to an American man or woman. Even the limited male electorate in England is not human in its voting privileges. Like the male in Kentucky, it is the house, not the man, that votes. If he moves into a cheaper house he loses his vote. That sort of property qualification does not touch the broad question in this country. Such men have fewer rights in England than the unfranchised women of the United States.

Pointers on Immigration.

Prof. Edward A. Ross of the University of Wisconsin has an interesting article in the November Century Magazine, upon the immigration question that I take pleasure in calling to the attention of Senator La Follette, Congressman Leontovich and other statesmen who fumble the tariff question with the difference between the wages of the United States and Europe. If Professor Ross is correct we have a serious European immigration problem for a long time. The most interesting thing in the article is the map, which makes it very plain that the immigration question is a "local question" and confined chiefly to the great concentration centers. This is a fact that is down wages to the European level, and it is where manufacturing is greatest. But from whatever angle our statesmen take Professor Ross he will be a troublesome lesson to them.

A New Bond Issue.

It is announced that the Erie Railroad is going to sell bonds to fund its outstanding certificates, which amount to $2,000,000. The Erie's funded debt has increased but $23,000,000 during the past five years, because fully $18,000,000 that have gone into new construction and equipment have come out of earnings, which have increased about 77 per cent during the five year period. The fact that the Erie is going to fund this debt at the present high rates of money, suggests that it is common with other railroads. It has given up the idea of getting money any cheaper. Dear money is going to be with us for some time to come, evidently, and if the railroads have to look to it to keep their wheels turning, everything up, for unless the roads are permitted to raise their rates they will be compelled to cut down their service. Even the Interstate Commerce Commission is beginning to see it.

State Life Insurance.

For this very reason, just expressed, I do not feel so alarmed for the railroads as I do for the people, broadly speaking. The railroads must have the money in earnings to pay their running expenses and their upkeep or go into the hands of receivers. The other alternative is government ownership, which is a good many railroad men are facing with a good deal of seriousness, just now. It is not to be wondered at that they do. Wisconsin is giving an example of state interference in the life insurance business which makes a man wonder why the halt is made there. If state officials can go into such competition, so may they go into banking, or the express business. Where is the limit? The singular fact is, too, in this instance that people are going to think the state is behind this insurance when it is not. The state guarantees nothing.

Plight of Bankers.

The bankers are coming to "themselves." The more they "roll" the less sympathy they will have. The chances are good that they will have just the same experience that the railroads have had. They will get tricked clear down the bottom by the come to, and realize that the public is "IT" with an underscore. It is already becoming apparent in New York, so that the Wall Street Journal comments upon it. That paper says: "The market for bank stocks has been practically 'dead' for some months past, and a striking decline has taken place, generally speaking, in their quoted values." If the bankers will but think back and learn something from the long record of mistakes made by railroad men, they will begin to take off their hats and speak softly to the progressive statesman, and the governing minority of the voters. It will come hard, but the sooner, the cheaper they will find it. They will do well to let Mr. Wilson's currency bill go through and take no share of the responsibility for its mistakes, if they want to get the worst, and get over it quickly. My progressive friend, Ed. Wins, of the Batavia National Bank of La Crosse, gave the right "steer" when he got back from Boston. He sees that if the medicine is unpalatable it is no advantage to play the baby until your nose is laid.

Milwaukee Art Exhibition.

The Milwaukee Art Society closed the first exhibition of the season, the first of 3,000 visitors. Today, the second exhibition opens. It is a most interesting collection, several hundred in number, of architectural drawings and designs for interior and exterior decoration, and sculpture. Such great architects as Cass Gilbert and McKim are at the head of the eastern examples and local architects also exhibit a large number of specimens of their work. It promises to be one of the most attractive and popular of the society's exhibitions.

This week the Art Society has taken a step forward that promises much for future growth and success, and as a result of this, the society is now in a position to take a more active part in the life of the city. Mr. Dudley Crafts, Watson of Chicago, has accepted the position of director of its affairs and will give his whole time to the work. He is an artist and has for some years been a member of the faculty of the Chicago Art Institute and is known all over the west as a lecturer upon art who inspires those with whom he comes in contact with enthusiasm and zeal.

TANGO WAS DANCED PROPERLY AT PARTY

Thirty Couples and Many Chaperones Enjoy Evening at East Side I. O. O. F. Hall Last Evening.

With the aid of George Hatch, instructor, they correctly regarding the new tango and other popular dances, as many as thirty couples enjoyed a refined dancing party last evening at the East Side I. O. O. F. hall, the largest extent. Many couples were present who were anxious to learn more about the tango, and they were all satisfied at the manner in which the young people conducted themselves. About thirty couples, including chaperones, numbering ten, more than crowded the balcony of the hall.

Before the party began, Mr. Hatch had a few words to say regarding the methods to be used in dancing the tango, and any other dances. "No tango of the shoulders will be allowed," he explained. "The tango will be danced properly or wiped out of Janesville, and that is up to you young people here tonight." After giving his course of instruction the couples proceeded with the regular program. On the whole the dancing was a reversal of the order at the last high school party in every sense of the word.

The party was an informal affair, invitations being sent out to over two hundred. The committee was composed of Willard Bennett, Walter Green and Harold Laughlin. Mr. Bennett had secured the services of Mr. Hatch for the evening.

TOWN LINE

Town Line, Nov. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. James Finley entertained their friends at one of the most enjoyable dancing parties of the season at their pleasant farm home last Friday evening. About seventy-five were present. A most elegant supper was served, the guests departing for their homes about three o'clock.

Mr. M. J. Plumb has been on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bartling were the guests of Mr. Bartling's father, Henry Bartling, Sr., Thursday and Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Bartling, formerly Miss Clara Van Houten, were married Tuesday, November 4th, at Galena, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Bartling left Friday for their future home at Platteville, where Mr. Bartling is engaged in business.

Miss Lucy Gilbert, who has been visiting at the home of J. C. Eddy in the past few days, left for Janesville Monday. From there she will soon leave for her home at Independence, Iowa.

Mrs. L. J. McCrea, who has been at the Beloit hospital the past three weeks, was brought home Thursday much improved.

A number of ladies from Afton and vicinity made a "bee" and arranged and settled the home of Mrs. McCrea Thursday morning, making it as comfortable as possible before her home coming.

Mrs. Lizette Walte will stay at the home of Mrs. McCrea for a time.

Born, November 2, to Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hayden, a daughter.

Mrs. Daniel Thorne spent Wednesday at the home of Roy Jones.

NEW REMEDY SAVES OLD FOLKS FROM KIDNEY AND BLADDER MISERIES

Sleep Disturbing, Bladder Weakness, Backache, Stiff Joints, Rheumatic Pains Disappear After Few Doses are Taken.

While people along in years are naturally more subject to weak kidneys, they can easily avoid the tortures of backache and rheumatism, and be saved the annoyance of getting up at night with disagreeable bladder disorders. Croxone promptly overcomes all such troubles by making the kidneys filter the blood properly and sift out the poisonous acids and waste matter that cause these troubles. It soaks right in and cleans out the stopped up, inactive kidneys, dissolves and drives out the uric acid and other poisonous impurities that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause rheumatism. It neutralizes the urine so it no longer irritates the bladder, overcoming unnecessary breaking up of sleep and helps the kidneys and bladder rid the system of all acid and strength. It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what else you have used. It is practically impossible to take this quick-acting, effective preparation without immediate results. It starts to work the minute you take it—the first time you use it an original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

A number of meetings have been held at the Lennan school and each one is anxiously waiting for good results and a large number of converts.

WILL SOON COMPLETE MAIN STREET BRIDGE

Two weeks' time should see the completion of the new concrete bridge over Spring Brook on South Main street according to the statement of City Engineer C. V. Kerck. The contractor, now has all the footings and pier basins completed and the whole walls poured up to the point where the superstructure begins. Forms are now being placed for the bridge deck. When this is finished a brick sidewalk will be put down. The railing will have square pilasters like those on the approaches of the Fourth avenue bridge. The new structure will be seventy-four feet long over all and twenty-six feet wide. It will have three twenty-four foot spans.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE BEST KIND OF LOVE.

"for the faults of married people continually spur up each of them, hour by hour, to do better, and to meet and love upon a higher ground."

Stevenson.

"W" WERE you so late?" said the maid to the man, reproachfully, after the first ceremonials of greeting had been properly attended to. "I thought you would never come."

"I'll tell you just why, darling," said the man frankly; "I met Mr. Allen, that old neighbor of ours who was almost like a father to us after our own father died. I haven't met him for over a year and he wanted to know all about the whole family. He kept me nearly half an hour."

"Half an hour, and you only had two hours to stay with me? Couldn't you get rid of him somehow?"

"Not without hurting his feelings, dear."

"And wouldn't it have been better to do that than to shorten our evening so, dear? Don't you love me better than that?"

For a moment the man looked troubled. He was a man with a conscience and a kind heart, and he had high ideals of love. But the maid was one of those rare and fortunate women who can put attractively, and the man was young, and so, of course, he kissed away the girl's pout instead of trying to make her see that he would have been spoiling their evening together far more thoroughly by tramping on a kind old man's feelings in his haste to enjoy it.

Of course it would not have done him any good if he had tried to explain, if it seemed expedient she might have pretended to understand but she would not have understood. For she is one of those people who are not capable of understanding the kind of love that makes those who feel it want to be more perfect in all their obligations than they have ever been before.

Her idea of a great love is an absorbing passion that would sacrifice anything to itself. "I could not love," she said, "I could not love a man who would seem to hate me."

A married woman once said to me, "Jack used to go to see his mother every week when we were first married, but I soon broke him of that. I don't believe in having too much to do with your in-laws. It's likely to make trouble."

"Think of that! Her husband tried to be a kind and faithful son (to one of the best mothers I ever knew, by the way) and instead of loving him more for it and doing everything to encourage him in it, she 'soon broke him of it.' And she thinks she loves him."

Real love makes folks want to continually "do better, and meet and love upon a higher ground." And whatever that emotion may be willing to sacrifice anything—honor, kindness, friendship, justice, family ties—to its selfish monopoly of the object, it certainly is not love.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a certain fatherless girl of my age, fifteen, of whom I am a great deal more than my other girl friends. Would it be wrong to give her a birthday gift? If not, what would you suggest? Would there be any harm in asking her to a show? She is a strictly first-class girl, and I want your advice. I believe I could like her better later on.

YOUR FAITHFUL READER.

She is not more than a mere candy and a box of nice candy for a birthday present would make her very happy. There would be no harm in taking her to an afternoon show, if your parents are willing and if she does not object. I always like to see boys and girls consult their parents about such things. Young folks really belong to the family partnership, you know, and it is only dignified to talk over various matters together.

I hope that you and the little girl will continue to be very good friends, and it is certainly kind of you to think of trying to make her a little happier.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Where must a person go to when they want to go on the stage in vaudeville, one who has a good education, playing piano and violin?

Also, does it cost much?

Most of the managers have their offices in New York. There are quite a few of them, and unless you have something extra good to offer you will not even get a hearing. If there is a vaudeville theatre in your own town, perhaps the manager of it will give you a hearing. If he considers your work worth while, he will induce to give you a letter of introduction to one of the New York managers.

I am afraid you would find it rather expensive to get on the vaudeville stage. We hear of big salaries paid to vaudeville artists, but the truth is that these are few and far between. Most of the actors get hardly any money, but they must furnish all their own clothes, etc., and then only have work part of the year, while they starve the rest of the time.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 16, have light hair and gray eyes, am not very dark, but spent the summer in the country and got rather tan.

(1)—Can you give me some harmless face bleach?

(2)—Is there any truth in the saying: "To wink with the right eye means love with the best hate?"

(3)—Do you think it would be wrong for me to exchange photos with a boy cousin of the same age?

(4)—I have a very seldom a gentleman call. Do you think I should worry about being an old maid?

(5)—When my chum, who is very pretty, and I are out together, she receives most of the attention. What can I do to appear more attractive?

LONESOME JOE.

(1)—Pathe the tanned skin with Buttermilk every night, letting it stay on over night. (2)—People who really love or really hate do not express their feelings by winks. That is only a silly saying. (3)—No. (4)—No girl of 16 needs to worry about being an old maid. A real man won't begin courting a girl until she is at least 18. (5)—If you are very pleasant and sweet, neatly and becomingly dressed, you should get as much attention as your chum.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are girls of fourteen and would like to have your advice.

(1)—What do you think of a girl fourteen years of age who corresponds with a boy and does not let her mother know?

(2)—What are the leading colors in coats this winter?

(3)—What should a girl and follow talk about when out walking?

BEYOND ROSE AND THE LIT.

(1)—She is doing very wrong and I hope she may not be compelled to regret it later on. Girls don't seem to think that they must pay up when they are older and they do that is not right. Deceiving one's mother never has a good ending.

(2)—Gray, dark blue, red and browns.

(3)—About the things you see pleasant about your friends, things you have read and the things you are both interested in.

continue beating; add the rind and fruit juices.

Pineapple Pudding—Two and three-quarters cups of scalded milk, one-quarter cup of cold milk, one-third cup of cornstarch, one-quarter cup of sugar, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-half can of grated pineapple, whites of three eggs. Mix the cornstarch, sugar and salt, dilute with cold milk, add to the scalded milk, stirring constantly until mixture thickens, afterwards occasionally; cook for fifteen minutes. Add the pineapple and whites of eggs beaten stiff, mix thoroughly and mould, chill and serve with cream.

These four minutes will enable you to take, inconspicuously, these exercises that will put to rout listlessness and dullness.

Here are three different breathing exercises that may be taken at one's desk, or while sitting in a chair, and will be found very beneficial.

The first: Sit quietly erect with the back pressed close against the chair back, with the feet resting squarely on the floor, hands down by the sides of the body, chest high and chin slightly elevated. Draw in the breath slowly, the slower the better, at the same time clenching the hands tight.

While inhaling count ten, hold the breath counting ten; exhale slowly, also counting ten. In this exercise raising the arms will greatly increase the benefits of the exercise, but as it is not so convenient, attention, it is wise to leave that part out.

The second: Place both hands clasped behind the neck, keep the elbows well back and inhale slowly, if possible, stretching the legs under the desk, or under the chair, and while holding the breath and while exhaling. HOT SUPPER DISHES.

For those who have supper, instead of dinner, at six, a hot dish is almost an essential, on these cool autumn evenings. Soups of various kinds, if liked, are easily prepared and served, and furnish a substantial beginning to the meal.

Boiled Dinner Hash—Chop fine the vegetables left from an old-fashioned boiled dinner—a beet or two, a few pieces of turnip and carrot, a good sized quarter of cabbage and a few potatoes and some of the corned beef with which the dinner was cooked. Season with some of the broth and steam and cook in a frying pan for an hour on the back part of the stove. Serve hot with dill pickles and bread and butter.

Delicious Dish—Take three real kidneys and remove all fat; cut a mild onion as fine as possible, shred and add a small bunch of parsley, a heaping tablespoonful of each. Add a tablespoonful of butter to a hot frying pan and drop the kidneys into it. Cover and steam for fifteen minutes, then pour over a half cup of sour fruit juice, and serve.

Lobster in Cream Sauce—In places where fresh lobsters are plenty, this will be a change from the usual ways of serving it. Boil the lobster in the shell, and then remove the meat and cut it in bits. Add the lobster meat to a rich white sauce, and just before serving squeeze a little lemon juice over the dish.

Sausage Omelet—Beat five eggs until light, add a finely chopped onion, a small green one preferred; add a heaping tablespoonful of chopped smoked ham or liver sausage. Season with salt and pepper and put into a hot omelet pan.

English Tea Cakes—Beat two eggs and add a cup of powdered sugar, beat well, add a half teaspoon of almond extract, a cup of flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder, mixed together, with a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt. Beat until smooth and then add a half cup of scalding hot milk. Bake in gem pans.

Sponge Cake—When we consider the price of butter and the yet reasonable price of eggs, though they are soaring, a sponge cake is not an extravagant one to prepare. Five eggs, one cup of sugar, one cup of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder. Beat the whites and yolks separately, add the sugar to the whites, then the yolks and the flour. Flavor to taste and bake in an angel food pan. This makes a large cake.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

By FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

Perhaps you know, perhaps you don't, that all breathing exercises are stimulating exercises and of especial benefit to those who sit at a desk all day before a business desk, typewriter, or work-table.

One of the best means of correcting fatigue is long, deep breathing. If the working man or woman has muscles have not been used, the deep breathing will help carry off the waste products by increasing the circulation.

These four minutes will enable you to take, inconspicuously, these exercises that will put to rout listlessness and dullness.

Here are three different breathing exercises that may be taken at one's desk, or while sitting in a chair, and will be found very beneficial.

The first: Sit quietly erect with the back pressed close against the chair back, with the feet resting squarely on the floor, hands down by the sides of the body, chest high and chin slightly elevated. Draw in the breath slowly, the slower the better, at the same time clenching the hands tight.

While inhaling count ten, hold the breath counting ten; exhale slowly, also counting ten. In this exercise raising the arms will greatly increase the benefits of the exercise, but as it is not so convenient, attention, it is wise to leave that part out.

The second: Place both hands clasped behind the neck, keep the elbows well back and inhale slowly, if possible, stretching the legs under the desk, or under the chair, and while holding the breath and while exhaling. This is simply the position taken in an ordinary yawn, so it will not attract attention.

The third: Clasp the hands behind the waist, draw the chest out and breathe in slowly, counting ten. At the same time clasp the hands together hard, get the shoulders as far back as possible and forcibly stretch the arms, then relax and exhale, counting ten. This is a splendid exercise for the arms and shoulders.

Now this is no "freak" advice that claims to make the well sick, the sick well, the thin people fat, the fat ones thin, and so on. It is simply a suggestion that to exercise each day in this manner will bring satisfactory results.

Some there are—of course—who will not do this and who will not find plenty of exercise in the performing of their work. That view of this plan is just what makes them tired at three or four in the afternoon; that makes the home woman think she is an abused creature, instead of a woman with the very best of God's gifts in her hands.

We run one set of muscles at six-horse power speed, never changing our position, and we are tired, and getting so nervous that our family or associates are in danger of coming near us, without an accident policy.

queer and heavy exert which is by no means becoming to many women.

Vests for women are to be had in the shops nowadays fashioned of silk, brocade and satin. They are devised to be worn with the tailored suits of the season, and come in all colors. The color of one chosen for a suit is usually in contrast, though it may, one wishes, be matching. The cost varies with the quality and workmanship applied in the making of the garment.

All smart skirts are gathered at the back of the waist line and the plain, closely fitting skirt—at this point—is distinctly out of the running. Of course, the fullness is between the waist line and the hip only, for below the hips the garment must cling closely to the figure.

The hats for little and big girls should be simple—simple in outline and in trimming—but they may be, and the most successful ones are designedly picturesque. There is a certain picturesque element in the rather large, floppy brimmed, low crowned hats of taffeta and velvet. The prettiest of these hats are trimmed simply with a large flat bow of ribbon, sometimes the plain taffeta ribbon, and again the moire.

The decorative effect of the artificial rose seems to be appreciated more and more by designers, and it is used in all sorts of strange ways, which would never have been thought of before this season. Arranged around the waist in garlands strung on metal threads, roses assist in exaggerating the size of the waist line the peculiar fashion of the moment.

A single rose is often fastened to the tail of a train. Roses catch up the ruffles of lace worn at the wrist, and serve to unite loose sleeve draperies. The large rose or bunch of roses at the waist line is almost invariable. Even roses are not used as a trim.

Roses are used in natural colors and in impossible tints. For hats roses with their foliage are made out of tan leather. They are principally used on small velvet and heavier shapes.

DINNER SALADS AND DRESSINGS at once. This is especially nice with cold asparagus. Thousand Island Dressing. Materials—Yolks hard-boiled eggs, two; paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful; salt, three-fourths teaspoonful; lemon juice, one tablespoonful; Tarragon vinegar, two tablespoonfuls; olive or peanut oil, one-half cupful.

Make a French dressing with the hard-boiled yolks pressed through a sieve; add the paprika and salt and gradually the oil and acids, with chopped beets and parsley. A little mayonnaise may be added if desired.

Euclid Salad. Materials—Beets, six; Philadelphia cream cheese, one; pimiento, one; olives, four; paprika, salt, capers, parsley. For each dressing, lettuce. Directions—Select nice bright red beets, not too large, put them on to cook in boiling water and cook just below the boiling point until done; peel, scoop out the centers and fill with the cheese mixed with the pimiento cut in small pieces, olives chopped fine, adding seasonings and enough mayonnaise to make a smooth and creamy; put a caper on top, place on a lettuce leaf with French dressing over the whole. Garnish with the tiny balls of the beets rolled in very finely chopped parsley. Serve very cold.

Vinegar Sauce. Material—Olive oil, six tablespoonfuls; Tarragon vinegar or lemon juice, three tablespoonfuls; paprika, one-fourth teaspoonful; salt, one-half teaspoonful; dash of cayenne or paprika; chopped parsley, one tablespoonful; chopped chives, one tablespoonful.

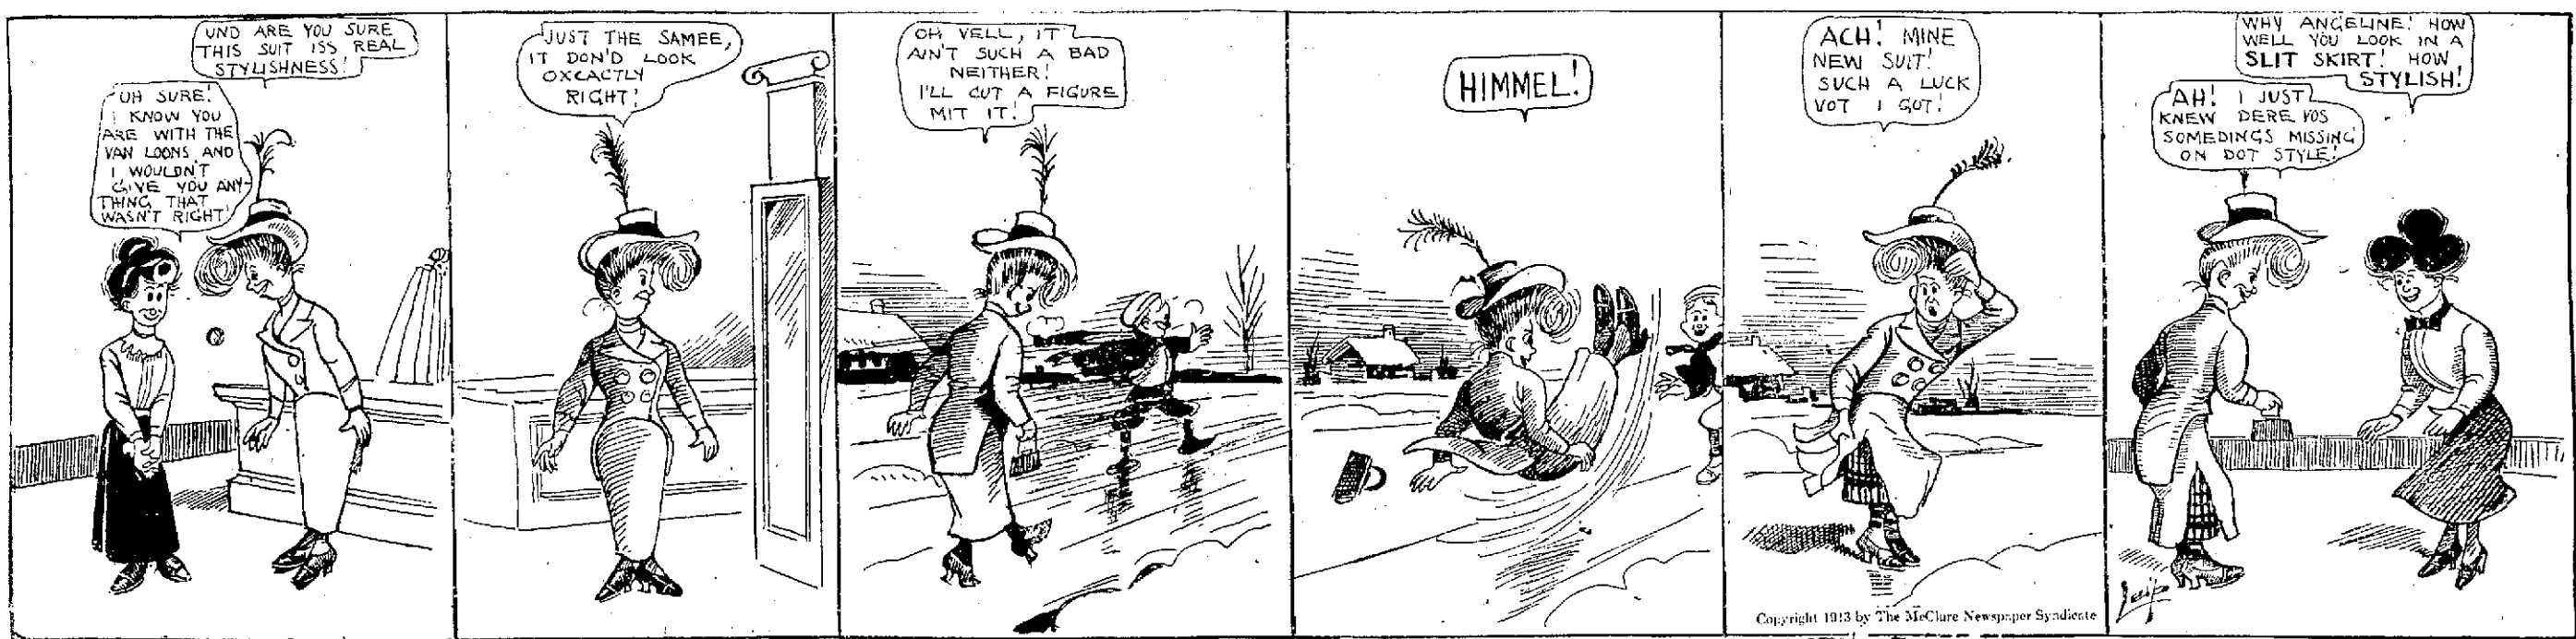

Directions—Have the bowl very cold and add a small piece of ice about the size of a hickory nut, salt, stirring rapidly. When thick and creamy and the oil is added, gradually pour in the vinegar, continuing the rapid stirring. Put in the finely chopped chives and parsley and use.

Some there are—of course—who will not do this and who will not find plenty of exercise in the performing of their work. HUSBAND NAILED RUBBER ON GATES

Wife so Weak and Nervous Could Not Stand Least Noise—How Cured.

Munford, Ala.—"I was so weak and nervous while passing through the Change of Life that I could hardly live. My husband had to nail rubber on all the gates for I could not stand it to have a gate slam."

"I also had backache and a fullness in my stomach. I noticed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was advertised for such cases and I sent and got a bottle. It did me so much good that I kept on taking it and found it to be all you claim. I recommend your Compound to all women afflicted as I was."—Mrs. F. P. MULLENDORF, Munford, Alabama.

An Honest Dependable Medicine is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Root and Herb medicine originated nearly forty years ago by Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for controlling female ills.

Its wonderful success in this line has made it the safest and most dependable medicine of the age for women and no woman suffering from female ills does herself justice who does not give it a trial.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The struggle discourages many a Citizen of Janesville.

Around all day with an aching back,
Can't rest at night;
Enough to make any one "give out."

Doan's Kidney Pills are helping thousands.
They are for kidney backache;
And other kidney ills.
Here is Janesville proof of their merit:

Mrs. M. Smith, 921 Center St. Janesville, Wis., says: "I suffered severely at times from rheumatic pains and backache. My sides hurt me and sometimes my kidneys were sore. I noticed that my kidneys acted too freely. One of my neighbors told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a box at the People's Drug Co. As soon as I began using them I felt better and my kidneys were in much better shape. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly now as I did three years ago when I told how much they did for me. I use Doan's Kidney Pills once in a while and they live up to all the claims made for them."

HOLTON OF THE NAVY

A Story of the Pressing of Cuba
By LAWRENCE PERRY

As for Holton, his health remained excellent. Natural resources had kept the fever in his blood at low ebb, and now he was confident that the last traces had been kicked out of his system. He looked rather expectantly for orders from the admiral recalling him to the squadron, but none came, and so he settled himself down to await developments, hopeful that his recent strenuous career had ended, and that for a time at least he might anticipate days of comparative ease.

On the 17th of July, General Shafter, his staff, brigade commander, and a goodly body of troops left the trenches and, with bands playing and flags flying, marched up the trail leading into Santiago, where the surrender took place before the two armies. Then the march continued into the city.

The Spanish soldiers, some twenty-two thousand men (Holton had underestimated their number), were to be shipped to Spain, and nothing remained to be done but to assume the reins of military government and set things in order. One of the first acts of the Americans was to release political prisoners from confinement, and then as evening fell the lights were lighted, the bands played in the patio of the palace, the Venus restaurant overflowed with American officers, the streets were crowded with men, women and children.

Meanwhile what were the Cubans doing? Many of them had their homes in Santiago and naturally they were anxious to return to them, and had fully expected to do so. Now by official mandate of the Americans they were barred from the gates.

Holton knew enough of the fiery temper of these men to realize that Garcia and the other commanding officers must sway great authority over their soldiers if they were to hold them in leash under such a situation as this.

He, of course, had no fears that Shafter would be unable to quell an outbreak, but at the same time it occurred to him that a complication not to be desired.

That the Cubans in the camps of Garcia and Castillo were openly talking of an uprising was known to everyone, and not even Garcia's assurances that he could keep them in hand quieted the fears of the more thoughtful among the officers. Yet there was no inclination to allow them to enter the city, the fear that they would turn loose upon the unarmed Spaniards still being potent.

In the absence of direct orders, Holton hardly knew what to do. His anxiety as to the outcome of the present predicament he kept to himself, not wishing to fill Washington with vague and perhaps causeless alarms.

to find highway for the La Tossa estate.

Soon he reached the lodge and gate which he had entered some nights before. Up the road he cantered and at length turned into the driveway leading to the La Tossa demesne. Two horses were tied to posts in front of the veranda, but the house itself was not thrown open to the morning air, the shutters being closed.

Something about the atmosphere of the building caused Holton to alight from his horse at a bend in the drive. Throwing the reins about the branch of a tree, he made his way through the underbrush, until looking through the foliage he could see the front of the house.

Here he waited. Why he knew not. What had come over him? Something inside was dampening the ardor with which he had set out on this important journey, and placing his spirits under a pall of utterly unreasonable foreboding. An incubus of doubt, almost of dread, settled upon him, and try as he would he could not shake it off.

And yet what nonsense! Here in the broad light of this beautiful, scintillating day to feel emotions which might be natural to a schoolgirl when alone in the dark! He could not understand it at all. But neither could he dissipate the spell.

At length, with sudden resolution, he came out of his hiding-place, mounted his horse and rode boldly up the driveway. He alighted at the doorstep, tethered his steed alongside the two other ponies, and mounting the steps, rang the bell, the echoes of which he could hear jangling and clattering throughout the house.

Awaiting a reply to his summons for some time, and receiving none, he pulled the bell again, now with irritable energy. Almost on the instant the door was flung open, and Miss La Tossa, still in her hunting suit, and accompanied by Pierre, stood before him.

She looked at him with cold, inquiring eyes, and Holton with a gasp stopped short.

"Why—why—" His voice failed him.

As the girl still regarded him with cold, vacuous eyes, Holton flushed angrily.

He drew himself up very stiffly.

"I—I beg pardon," he said. "I fear I—I came here under some sort of a misunderstanding."

A gleam of an expression crossed the girl's face. "Pierre," she remarked to her attendant, who stood rigidly at her side, "this is the gentleman we met near Sevilla, is it not?"

Pierre glanced at Holton, his face filled with an expression of savage hatred.

"It is, senorita," he replied.

"Yes, we met this gentleman at Sevilla, Pierre, and he said several things. Did he not, Pierre?"

"Yes, senorita."

"And, Pierre, what did he say?"

"He said that the Americans were to remain faithful to their promise, and that Cuba, after Santiago was captured, was to be placed in the control of the Cuban army."

"Yes," The Cuban girl had not glanced at Holton, who stood listening, rigid and angry.

"Yes, Pierre," she repeated; "and so Santiago was captured by the Americans—and the Cubans. And did the Americans keep their promise, that sacred promise?"

"No, they did not, senorita. They refused to permit the Cubans to enter the city, their own city, to attend the surrender."

"Yes, and so, Pierre, when this American officer told us our rights would be observed, he did not say what was true. Did he?"

"No, senorita. He lied."

As Holton leaped forward with an exclamation, the girl raised her hand. "One moment, please. I am now going to speak to you direct. You are beneath my contempt. As a spy, I respect all that you did, save one thing. As a spy you did your duty. You visited the Spanish lines, you pried into the affairs of our army, and you won the love and the friendship of General Garcia. All these things were your duty. But all this did not satisfy you. No. In addition, you set out to win my love."

She buried her face in her hands and a dry sob escaped her.

before replying, could stand no more. He raised his hand.

"Stop!" he cried with a voice of thunder. "Do you know what you are saying?"

"Yes, I do." She leaned on Pierre's arm. "Take me away, Pierre."

"One minute, Pierre." Holton's voice was low and tense. "Before you go, Miss La Tossa, I wish to tell you something. Anything I have said to you in the past I stand by. The Americans are going to relinquish this country to the Cubans—but that is a matter neither here nor there. Your manner is insulting and unfair, Miss La Tossa. I came here today with gladness in my heart."

"With deceit—with more lies!" she interrupted dramatically. "As a spy, I bow to you. You are very clever."

Holton straightened, his face white and drawn. He looked at her for a moment, searching her every feature. Something in his expression quieted her, and she pointed her hand at him.

"Listen," she said. "Last night my brother went into Santiago with a letter to you from me. He arrived at your quarters. Then he was seized and thrown out of the city for violating the order of your general that Cubans remain at a distance. Perhaps you can explain why."

"I cannot. I never received the letter."

She shook her head. "All that is very little matter," she continued. "That letter contained what I have now said to you. And it said this besides: That the enemies of my country are my enemies, and that it is clear that no greater enemy to Cuba than the United States ever existed."

She bowed and turned away. Holton stood for a moment watching her, and then, without a word, faced abruptly and walked toward his horse.

CHAPTER XVI.

A Frightful Revelation. Holton's ride back to the city was the most forlorn he had ever taken. In the face of a hand he had been lowered from the heights of ecstasy to the depths of despair. A beautiful dream had been lived out, and the bitter realities of waking had come.

As he sat before his tent thinking, a man paused in front of him, holding his broad sombrero in his hand. As Holton glanced at him curiously his face lighted with recognition.

"Pierre!" he cried, rising. "What do you want?"

The Cuban nodded to him gravely. "Can you come with me, Lieutenant Holton? It is very important."

Holton, without replying, accompanied the Cuban.

The two hurried along until at length the Cuban stopped in front of a long, rambling, one-story building, evidently used at one time as a barracks for the Spanish soldiers. He leaned down and took off his shoes, motioning Holton to do likewise.

Realizing that the situation was rife with importance, the American sat down and complied without a word.

Then, rising in his stocking feet, Pierre took from his pocket a key, unlocked the door, and entered, motioning Holton to follow. After they were both inside, the Cuban closed the door and locked it, withdrawing the key and placing it in his pocket again.

"She has not arrived yet," remarked Pierre. "I am happy. I feared it would be too late."

"Too late for what? Who did you expect to find here?" whispered Holton, almost irritably.

For answer Pierre squeezed his arm and silently pointed out into the night.

Following the man's finger, Holton saw the form of a woman alighting from a pony. As his eyes strained he recognized Miss La Tossa.

By her side was a man and, as his face turned toward the building, Holton gasped and whispered hoarsely to his companion:

"Give me that key!"

The Cuban's hand tightened on his arm like a vise.

"No—come. I am certain now the way is clear. I feared he was below. It is all right. Come."

Something in the fellow's manner made Holton's obedience implicit. Without a word he followed the man. The Cuban had lighted a candle. Following the light, Holton could see a long tunnel opening before him. In the apartment itself were several electrical appliances, and a push-button was in the wall.

For the man with the girl was none other than that of the omnipresent and apparently immortal waiter of the New Willard.

Pierre laughed without mirth. "The man is a devil!" he replied. "The firing party at his execution was selected by an officer friendly to him. They shot over his head. He pretended death. Thus he escaped. General Garcia was tricked by his own men."

Holton nodded.

"But what is the meaning of all these instruments?" he asked. "And why have you brought me here?"

The man faced Holton gravely. "This tunnel," he answered, "leads under the heart of Santiago. At short distances it is packed with dynamite. This key will release the spark that sets it off. It is the plan that the city and the American soldiers shall be blown to pieces, after which, the Cuban soldiers now gathered on the secret trail, leading into the town, will rush in and assume control."

Holton's breath ceased for the moment and half chokingly he placed his hand on Pierre's shoulder.

"And Miss La Tossa?" he asked quaveringly.

Dinner Stories

"Where you live?" asked the kind lady, as she angled in her purse for a penny.

"Mumdad," replied the Boston bred lubber, "I live close to nature."

"Vell," said the kind lady, as she looked him over, "I'd advise you to move next door to a laundry."

S. S. Shubert the theatrical manager, was practicing in a Broadway restaurant, the American chorus girl.

"She is not only prettier," said Mr. Shubert, "than her English or French or Italian sister, but she is also brighter, gayer, wittier. It's a pleasure to hear her talk."

near me at Sherry's the other day. Their skirts were slashed, and they wore those smart, new-fangled shoes that fasten with ribbon—narrow ribbon running in criss-cross up their long, slim, silken ankles.

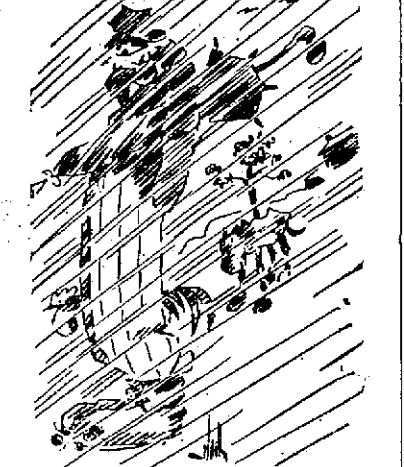

"I've got no use for your rah-rah college boy," said the first chorus girl, swinging her shapely foot in and out of her slashed skirt. "He reminds me of a china doll."

"Why," asked the other girl, "because he's so pink and pretty?"

"No," said the first chorus girl. "Because he gets broke so soon."

Young Harold was late in attendance for Sunday school, and the minister inquired the cause. "I was going fishing, but father wouldn't let me," announced the lad. "That's the right kind of a father to have," replied the reverend gentleman. "Did he explain the reason why he would not let you go?" "Yes, sir. He said there wasn't bait enough for two."

NEMESIS

BY WILL SEAT.

ND the jewels, too; my, my!" sighed Mrs. Bullion.

"Yes, the jewels, too, my diamonds and emeralds, the sapphire set and that great black pearl; it is all like some horrible dream. I watched her close to her chair, but we never even thought of missing them until we reached the hotel, and then it was too late."

"Served you right," said the chief of police, "for carrying valuables so exposed."

"But I don't think so a bit. As I told him, the safest place for jewelry is where nobody would think of looking for it."

"But you didn't select such a place, my dear madam," I ventured, "since somebody did think, and what is worse, acted on the thought."

"Oh, la, Mr. Sniffen, you are always so liberal. Of course, I only mean that she must be an unusually clever woman."

"Her escape shows that," I agreed. "It is possible that the conductor and the porter between them couldn't give any clue to her identity."

"It was days before they were examined," Mrs. Casenove explained. "The conductor had no recollection of any such person. But the porter said that he remembered helping the lady in green off the train—she wore a very stylish tailor-made suit of green, you know—and that she was young and pretty, with hair so light and thick as to attract his notice."

"What sharpened his memory, I guess, was the tip she gave him as she alighted from the train. He thought it was a bright penny at first, but it proved to be a gold dollar with both sides polished down and the monogram 'S. S.' on one side. There were tiny clasps that showed it had been a part of one of those abused monogram bangles in vogue in the beautiful days of tides and tating, too long ago to be of value as a clue."

"I don't know about that," returned Mrs. Bullion argumentatively. "It may have been a pocket piece carried perhaps in memory of her mother and paid out by mistake. I suppose the creature was so wild to get away that she didn't know what she did."

"It may be," sighed Mrs. Casenove, as she signaled her place to go to dinner, "but to my mind it is the theft is ever traced it will be through the great black pearl."

Maitland Briare did not take part in the general dispersion. She lingered until I had resumed my seat and then came to me, looking down from her slim height through the gleaming glasses that frosted her beauty with a sort of calm cynicism.

"What do you think, Mr. Sniffen?" she asked, tauntingly.

"Oh, I don't think."

"Ah, but it seemed to me that you did think," and surprisingly, too. One usually so self-contained does not start without an adequate cause."

"Perhaps it was memory that pricked the memory of a certain 'S. S.' who may have been charming despite the tides and tating. Perhaps you are feeling to take part in our little drama, for I am sure there will be one—Button, button, who's got the button?" you know."

"Perhaps you will be the eccentric old friend whose mission it is at the critical moment to right the wrongs and shoot out the goats from the sheep. If so, Mr. Sniffen, pray be a letter perfect in your part before you come on the scene." And with a shake of her finger, about as roguish as the accolade of a queen, Miss Briare glided away.

I never did like the girl, she was so infernally clever, and so ruthless in the use of her cleverness. I sat for a time wondering why I hadn't crushed her with this or that reproach. Then I took from my pocket the letter I had received that morning from my brother Peter in the South and read it again. It ran as follows:

Of course you remember poor Sal-lie Sergeant, for whom you sighed in vain. I know you will take an active interest in her daughter, Mrs. Brompton, who goes North on business connected with her late husband's estate. As if at the touch of a hand I raised my eyes. A fair haired lady in a dark traveling suit of green was at the desk registering her name.

A charming and lovely woman, Mrs. Brompton; bright, sweet natured, a little helpless perhaps, yet all the more feminine for that. I forgot my vague suspicions, as one forgets the winter shadows when the vernal sunshine streams.

It was difficult to get her down to business, but little by little with many a diversion, winsome yet provoking, she explained as much as she understood.

Maitland Briare, I fear had been present would again have taunted me for starting. But then she might well have started also, for Mance was an admirer of hers.

The two young women already were intimate. The head waiter had seated Mrs. Brompton at the Casenove table; and although, or perhaps because, Mrs. Casenove eyed the newcomer askance, Maitland had taken her into the cold storage of her heart. Now Mance was to come on the scene tightening the circle of interest.

It all seemed to be of the very weaving of fate, as well laid as an exposition of a drama. If so, it wasn't long before the real action began.

The dinner that night opened with the dull formality which one would expect from such a casual party of five. Mrs. Casenove was latently watchful. Maitland was patiently indifferent. Mrs. Brompton was dis-trait, as if busy with the legal inter-view which was to come, while I, finding myself a negligible quantity, took for the moods of the aunt and niece.

I found it too in the extraordinary conduct of Seth Mance. This self-poised young man and astute lawyer acted like one bewitched. He had eyes and words for no one but Mrs. Brompton, and while the glances were timid and the speech was confused there was no mistaking the passion that animated both. Talk about love at first sight! He was a demonstration of it, palpable to all except the object of this sudden obsession.

I have said that I didn't like Maitland Briare, believing her both clever and cunning. If as I suspected, she was in love with Mance, it was obvious that not only must her indifferent pose be assumed, but that underneath it the worst elements of those qualities must be at work, even as a snake may lie torpid while waiting to eject its stored venom. The play then which she had foreseen was actually in progress, though in her proud cynicism there had lurked no doubt lest so mortifying a part might come to her. So my interest deepened into a breathless anxiety.

It was too cleverly and cunningly done for me to see how and by whom it was done, but at an instant when Mrs. Brompton raised her handkerchief to her lips something bright clanked on the floor. Mance was after it like a flash, no doubt thinking she had whipped it out from the pretty pocket that swung by her side.

"Permit me; this must be yours," week I will have both thief and booty. I pledge you, if you will only do the right thing, if we all will only forgive and forget."

And while Mrs. Casenove mumbled out an apology and Mrs. Brompton vaguely declared that if she had lost such gems she was sure she would be even more hasty, I saw the apathy on Maitland Briare's face change in to an agony of baffled rage.

There was no legal consultation that night. As consciousness of the insult gradually burned, Mrs. Brompton excused herself and went agitatedly to her room. Mance at once devoted himself to Maitland Briare, without any thought or care for Mrs. Brompton. I prevented her mad resentment from driving her to other extremes.

"You should have thought of that before."

"I should indeed. But remember I had never seen Violet before—I was like one entranced. Remember, too, I had no idea that Miss Briare cared any more for me than I cared for her—flirtation caring, you understand. But at least I learned that her own judgment censured her for acting so occasionally. At least I did gain time."

"Time for what? I am all in the dark."

"Time to thwart the plot I am convinced has been laid against Mrs. Brompton. Listen; this is the situation as I construe it."

Miss Briare must have some prior knowledge of Mrs. Brompton, for she knew that the gold bangle belonged to her; that she was in fact the woman dressed in green suspected of the theft on the train. For her own reasons she has kept this knowledge to herself for Mrs. Casenove's surprise when Mrs. Brompton avowed that the bangle piece was hers was too spontaneous to be doubted.

"Admitting such a plot, Miss Briare on reflection must have seen that her action in throwing the bangle piece on the floor was premature and ill-advised, for after all it is a far cry from admitted ownership of the piece to proof of the theft of the jewels."

"I agree with you there," I interposed, absorbed even in spite of myself. "I heard Mrs. Casenove say that it would take the black pearl which is unique, you know, to trace the thief, and I believe she was right. But why should Miss Briare plot against Mrs. Brompton, except out of jealousy, and you yourself disavow that motive for her?"

"That I don't know; that I must find out," returned the lawyer, thoughtfully. "Of course I can see a motive—an adequate motive."

"This man, to whom Mrs. Brompton in her innocence sold a principal-ity for a song, would not hesitate to do anything to constrain her, to force her to compromise. You see I have tied his hands with an injunction and a court of equity is sure to restore the property."

"But on the other hand I haven't the slightest reason to suspect any possible connection between Miss Briare and this Jermain, a man of the world, a plausible, shifty adventurer from nowhere."

"What's that name again?" I demanded sharply. "Jermain? Where the deuce have I heard it? Oh, of course—Brother Peter's letter." And, taking the missive from my pocket, I read the concluding part as follows:

"Tell her lawyer that that precious scoundrel of a Jermain used to go by the name of Briare, indeed, from what I hear, that is his real name."

"There," cried Mance, "there is the missing link. Violet is involved with a gang of sharpers. They have studied her nature, her innocence, her dislike for trouble, her simplicity, if I may say it, adorable to me."

"Of course, Miss Briare, all unknown to her aunt, took the jewels herself. This man may be her brother, or, indeed, he may be her husband."

"They're a bad lot, Mr. Sniffen. Why, Mrs. Casenove, who I admit is honest in the matter, was a cook when old Casenove, in the depths of his senility, married her. Listen now, and I'll tell you what we must do. It is a war to the knife, without discrimination of youth or sex."

And when he had finished, somehow or other, I felt sorry for Maitland Briare.

Certainly, if Miss Briare was out for a full, she was riding most blithely and jauntily. Mance's changed attitude of indifference toward his client and increased devotion toward herself exhilarated her with the wine of happiness. Mrs. Brompton, warned by what exigencies in her case required she should overlook Mrs. Casenove's insult, showed a languid friendliness for all which seemed to put her out of the running as a possible rival.

It was while matters were at this juncture that Mrs. Casenove invited Mrs. Brompton, Mance and me to take tea in her apartments.

I was the first of the three to arrive. After greeting the widow and her niece, I was presented by the former to Mr. Jermain, "a connection of ours" she added somewhat confusedly.

"And a good suit, too, to belong to," I laughed the flashily dressed man, impudent of whiskers and manner. "Honor cards, every one."

Just then Mance came in.

"Hullo, Jermain," he said easily, "it is pleasant to meet you on a neutral field." And as he turned to Maitland Briare I heard him tell her that he was a "t" of the case, anyway; there was really no merit in it.

"Then why do you bother with it?" she asked.

"You know," he whispered back, "why I am so anxious to make money."

For once her face softened into rosy loveliness.

"Ah, if you will only act as I indicate," she murmured, "there will be a fortune for you both."

And even as he was protesting his subservience in all things Mrs. Brompton entered in her detached and dreamy way.

"I am so very glad to see you, my dear," said Mrs. Casenove pressing forward, I must admit, with genuine heartiness. "I want to introduce Mr. Jermain, a—a connection of ours. If the name has any unpleasant associations I hope this meeting may be the means of ending them. Mrs. Brompton and I, Fred, have also had a difference, in which I am ashamed to say I was absolutely wrong. But we have shaken hands and agreed to forgive and forget as I hope you both will."

Beaming like the harvest moon Mrs. Casenove gave way as Mrs. Brompton swept graciously forward; but an instant later the moon suffered a complete eclipse.

"The audacity of her!" Mrs. Casenove screamed, fairly tearing her puffs in her excitement. "Can I believe my eyes? The brazen hussy, and she just saying how sorry I was and that we must forgive and forget! Look, Maitland, look, she has the great black pearl in the neck of her gown."

And truly, as we thronged around, there underneath the tulle—that was such a mate of Mrs. Brompton's placid beauty darkly glowered a wondrous gem.

"I didn't know," remarked the lady, quite unmoved. "I called the maid on watch to help me. Perhaps she put it there by mistake. I'm sure I don't want it."

"Oh, this is too much!" raved Mrs. Casenove. "By mistake! She doesn't want it! As if there could be any mistake; as if everybody wouldn't want the great black pearl, the only one in the world, that Casenove bought at the Paris exposition. Of course she's got all the rest of my jewelry. I'll call an officer and have her rooms searched at once."

With that slowness in realizing evil which was her trait, Mrs. Brompton looked confusedly toward Mance, but though I could see him grow pale under the strain he at a warning glance from Maitland Briare folded his arms and spoke not a word.

"Mance is right," declared Jermain, bustling forward, "so unfortunate an affair the least said is soonest mended. I'm sure that kindly old gentleman, Mr. Sniffen, must agree with us both that this is a matter for compromise."

"Now we all know that Mrs. Brompton has some sort of an ill-advised suit against me. I suggest then that if she will sign this paper which I happen to have with me, I'll undertake to recoup my aunt!—I mean, of course, my connection, Mrs. Casenove, for her loss and forgive and forget will be the motto of all concerned."

"Isn't that right, Maitland? Don't you feel that Mance should consent?"

"Indeed I do," replied Miss Briare, for once simple and sincere in her engrossing interest.

Mance took the paper; he read it over carefully; he thrust it into his pocket.

"Ah, I see," he said, "a consent on the part of Mrs. Brompton that the injunction may be vacated and the suit discontinued. You don't want much, Jermain. Now I also happen to have a paper—great minds, you know. Suppose you sign this instead and then we will forgive and forget."

Jermain took the bulky document and turned green.

"A conveyance back to Mrs. Brompton of the tract of land I bought from her," he muttered. "What does it mean?"

"It means that you are a swindler and that I have full proof against you," flamed Mance. "It means that you have bribed that divorced wife of yours, if you ever were divorced, to act with you in stealing the jewels and trying to implicate my client in their theft."

"It means that I have the affidavit of the maid on watch that that wretch paid her well to put the pearl in Mrs. Brompton's dress as a joke. It means if you don't sign and execute that deed in five minutes before Sniffen here, who is a notary, I'll have the whole precious crew of you behind the bars."

"Oh, Violet—I mean Mrs. Brompton, forgive me if I have seemed to betray you, it was my love, my love!"

As he turned to her, as I turned to the desk, I glanced instinctively toward Maitland Briare. She was gliding tranquilly to the door leading to the other rooms of the apartment. As she brushed aside the curtain she, too, turned and looked, gently, wistfully. Then the curtain fell in place. So a star may shine before it is again blotted out by the storm.

Jermain signed and executed the deed. I won't say with what muttered imprecations; and then he slammed out of the room.
